EUROPE.

Rumored Successful Sortie by the Paris Garrison.

An Aid of Trochu Said to Have Reached Bordeaux.

The German Advance on Havre and Tours Abandoned.

Anxiety Created by the Luxembourg and Eastern Questions.

Agencies in Operation to Bring About an Armistice.

THE FRANCO-PRUSSIAN WAR.

Another Grand Sortie from Paris Indicated—The Armies Threatening Havre and Tours Retiring Toward Paris.

BORDEAUX, Dec. 14.—Rumors are circulating here that a sortie of greater proportions than the last has been made from Paris, and has met with unexpected success. The following official dispatches have been received by the Government:

HAVRE, Dec. 14.—The Prussian force, which was preparing to attack this city, is hurriedly retiring.

CAEN, Dec. 14.—A balloon from Paris landed today at Honfleur with dispatches and letters, which have been forwarded to their destination.

THE MOVEMENT OF TOURS ABANDONED.

BORDEAUX, Dec. 14—Evening.—The City of Tours is no longer menaced. The enemy is retreating toward Paris. Minister GAMBETTA is not coming to Bordeaux; he has gone back to the Army of the Loire, and will remain with it for the present.

INTENSE EXCITEMENT AT BORDEAUX.

The Government here has given to the public, as yet, nothing official from Paris. The excitement in the city is intense. People are coming from all quarters to hear the news of the great sortie which, they believe, has taken place at Paris. It is said an Aid-de-Camp of Gen. TROCHU has arrived here.

Official Dispatches from Bordeaux—The Advance on Blois and Tours—Rumored Bombardment of Blois.

BORDEAUX, Dec. 14.—The following news is official: There has been no serious engagement since the 10th inst. The evacuation of the triangle formed by the towns of Vertueil, Brezolles and Brenx is confirmed. In the Seine Inferieure the enemy seems to be withdrawing. Dieppe has been free since the 10th. Evreux and Serqugny have been occupied by the Germans. A number of small engagements, in which the French were successful, are reported to have occurred. On the left banks of the Loire the Prussians occupy Centres, Montrichard and Ramorantin. Prisoners assert that the losses of the army of Prince FREDERICK CHARLES during its combats with Gen. CHANZY have not been less than 20,000 men, and that the villages in the neighborhood are filled with wounded. There is no communication with the north of France. The journals here demand prompt elections to the Constituent Assembly. News has reached here that the Prussians surprised at Chambord some Mobiles and Franco-Tirenrs. It is asserted that the Prussians have not injured the Chateau de Chambord.

BLOIS AND TOURS.

It is reported that the Prussians have bombarded Blois and now occupy one of the faubourgs of Tours. M. GAMBETTA was there when the Prussians demanded the surrender. He ordered the defense of the city and had the bridge over the Loire blown up. The defense was needed to secure the safety of the force under Gen. CHANZAY, which moved toward the west, where it will be heavily reinforced and resume the offensive. Gen. BOURBAKI is ready to resume the offensive. M. GAMBETTA repeats his statement that BOURBAKI's forces are in good condition.

LATER.—The report that the Prussians are at Tours is contradicted.

A dispatch from Alencon says the Prussians retreated from Vermeuil and Dreaux toward Chartres and Versailles. Dispatches from the east show a number of minor successes for the French.

Reinforcements for the Army of the Loire—Operations of France-Tireurs—The Garibaldians.

BORDEAUX, Dec. 14—Evening.—A review was held here today of the battalions which are about to set out to reinforce the Army of the Loire. An immense number of troops, well equipped, were on the ground. The France-Tireurs are very active, and we hear of their exploits in all parts of the country. Several convoys of provisions have recently been surprised by them, and many Prussians have been taken prisoners. The Garibaldians have inflicted heavy losses in killed and wounded on the enemy in the eastern departments, and have hindered his progress. The Government of National Defense has made RICIOTTI GARIBALDI member of the Legion of Honor.

Havre and Honfleur—Determination to Resist—Havre and Dieppe Closed to Neutral Vessels.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—Dispatches from Havre report that city and Honfleur quiet. A force of 20,000 men has been thrown out to confront the Germans. Havre is filled with war material. There are a number of gun-boats in the Seine. From Honfleur it is reported that no Prussians have been discovered by the French scouts.

BORDEAUX, Dec. 14.—The Government has announced that the ports of Havre and Dieppe are not open to neutral vessels.

Occupation of Blois Confirmed—Surrender of the Garrison of Montmedy.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—The Prussians have certainly occupied Blois; but the report that they were at Tours is not confirmed....The official report of the surrender of Pfalzbourg states that 52 officers, 1,600 men and 53 guns were captured with the fortress.

SURRENDER OF MONTMEDY.

Montmedy has also surrendered to the Germans. The besiegers did not bombard the town, as was reported. They battered the walls with solid shot, and as soon as they had effected a breach, the place capitulated.

Miscellaneous—A Corps of French Arms Awaiting Convoy—American Ambulances—Prussian Veracity—The New German Loan.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—The American steamship Eris, from New-York, laden with American arms for the French, is off Cowes, where she will be conveyed by French men-of-war to a French port....The American ambulance at Paris is extolled as a model of efficiency and a curative success....The Independance Belge laments that the Prussian war reports have lost their character for veracity at first ascribed to them.....The new German loan is already quoted at a premium.

LONDON, Dec. 14—Midnight.—It is reported that Fecamp, a seaport town twenty-one miles north north-east of Havre, has been occupied by the Germans.

BERLIN, Dec. 14.—The session of the Prussian Diet was opened today. The Royal speech, which was read by one of the Ministers, admits that the success of the war against France is due to the patriotism of the people, and promises that the Budget will be submitted at the earliest moment possible.

THE LATEST COMPLICATIONS.

Anxiety in England Over the Luxembourg Question—Condemnation of Russia and Prussia—French Participation in the Conference—Sheridan and Burnside at Constantinople—The Austrian Army.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—The anxiety about the result of the Luxembourg affair causes much depression in business of all kinds. The Times of today editorially protests against the attitude of Prussia toward Luxembourg, as well as against that of Russia toward Turkey. The attitude of both Powers, says the Times, is indefensible, but it is not the duty of England to interfere.

THE FRENCH ARMISTICE AND THE CONFERENCE.

BORDEAUX, Dec. 14.—It is officially announced that France has not refused to take part in the Conference on the Eastern question. The neutral Powers understand that the presence of France is necessary, and are now seeking a way to bring it about. They know that Prussia has refused to treat with this Government unless it is backed by a Constituent Assembly, and in order that such body may be elected, they are endeavoring to procure an armistice between Prussia and France, on conditions which will allow the revictualing of Paris. The statement made by some journals that Minister GAMBETTA had taken such steps for a cessation of hostilities is incorrect.

SIGNIFICANT, VERY!

The presence of Gens. SHERIDAN and BURNSIDE at Constantinople, is commented on in diplomatic circles here.

AUSTRO-HUNGARIAN FORCES.

PESTH, Dec. 13.—At the sitting of the Hungarian delegation, today, M. BENNIGSEN replied to a question that the Austro-Hungarian Army consists of 354,869 regulars, and 187,527 Landwehr. There has been an increase of 278 guns since 1867. The regulars possess 209,279 breech-loaders, and the Landwehr 137,127 muzzle-loaders, of which 15,000 more are required for their armament.

The American Fleet Offered to Russia—A Formal Denial of an Absurd Story—The New Complications.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—Much amusement is created here at the very positive statement of the St. Petersburg correspondents of the Indépendance Belge, to the effect that the President has written an autograph letter to the Emperor ALEXANDER, tendering him the aid of a fleet of war vessels in case of war, &c. The statement is so exceedingly definite that it may possibly deceive some people, but it is only necessary to declare that it is pure fiction. Neither the President himself, nor his secretary, have written any such letter, or anything which could be construed or twisted into a coloring for such a statement. Some weeks since the cable brought this report, and it was laughed at then, and not deemed worthy of contradiction. Its now more emphatic form deserves an equally emphatic exposure.... The private telegrams received here since yesterday from Europe regarding the last phase of the Eastern question, and the new complication of the Luxembourg difficulty, give rise to a very uneasy feeling. It is known that these matters have been discussed today in official quarters with unusual warmth, and further developments are anxiously awaited.

GENERAL EUROPEAN NEWS.

English Cotton Mills Burned—Threatened Election Disturbances in Ireland—Rumors Regarding a Chinese Trade Crisis.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—HOYLE's cotton mills at Bolton have been destroyed by fire.... A force of nearly 2,000 cavalry and infantry have been ordered to Londonderry for fear of disturbance at the approaching anniversary of the establishment of the union of Great Britain and Ireland. ....The recent rumors of an impending trade crisis in China are contradicted.

LONDON, Dec. 15.—The ship Pomona, for Philadelphia, foundered at sea. Her crew were saved and landed today at Plymouth. The ship Countess of Durham has put into Yourhall, having been damaged in a gale and lost her deck-load.

ORPHANS OF THE WAR.

Opening of the Fair and Bazaar for the Union Home and School—Address by Gen. McClellan.

The Fair for the benefit of the orphans of the Union Home and School for Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans was opened last evening at the Seventy-first Regiment Armory, at the junction of Broadway, Sixth-avenue and Thirty-fifth-street. The arrangements are not all complete yet, and one room is still in the hands of the carpenters and gas-fitters, but by next week everything will be in order. The preparations for the opening were fully described in the TIMES of yesterday. Last evening the exercises attendant upon the formal opening were presided over by Gen. J. G. ROBINSON. The band from Governor's Island was in attendance, and Company E of the Seventy-first Regiment was on duty as a guard of honor. The stage was occupied by several distinguished gentlemen, among whom was Dr. BELLOWS, the chief of the Sanitary Commission during the war, Gen. MCCLELLAN, Hon. WM. M. EVARTS, Judge DALY and others. After a few remarks by way of introduction by Gen. ROBINSON, Gen. MCCLELLAN was presented, and was received with enthusiastic cheering. He referred in eloquent terms to the sacrifices which the soldiers had made in the war of the rebellion, and to the obligation which the nation owed them and their descendants. He then said that the subject which was brought to the attention of the public by this Fair was one which stood on its own merits and must commend itself to all. He simply presented in the name of the Grand Army of the Republic, this cause, which was not a charity but a duty. It had been said of Americans that they were devoted to the worship of the almighty dollar, but whether the saying was merited or not, we do not deserve it now. There was no city in the Union, and no country on the face of the earth that was so liberal in the causes of charity as this, and he was sure that this cause would meet with a ready response from the patrons of the Fair. In conclusion, he asked his hearers to come to the aid of the noble ladies who had taken charge of the education and support of the orphans of those who had fallen in defense of their country. If this movement was successful here, it would stimulate the formation of other organizations in other cities, and thus the good work would be extended.

Hon. WILLIAM M. EVARTS in the course of his remarks referred to the custom in Greece, not only to erect monuments to the memory of those who had fallen in defense of their country, but to build asylums for the support and education of their children. He thought that the State should not be charged with this duty, but that the same patriotic impulse which sent forth the fathers of these children to fight, should induce us to contribute to the support and education of these orphans.

Rev. Dr. BELLOWS referred to the work of the Sanitary Commission during the war, and stated that the most effective aid he received in organizing the Commission was contributed by Gen. MCCLELLAN, who personally went with him to President LINCOLN, and urged the work upon him. From that, beginning what great results had followed! The system we inaugurated had been adopted in the war between the Prussians and French, and thus many of the horrors of war had been mitigated. In conclusion, Dr. BELLOWS referred to the Union Home and School as an institution deserving the most liberal patronage. It was excellently conducted, and by the aid of this Fair would be made far more useful than it had ever been. There were tens of thousands of children orphans of soldiers and sailors—who might be brought under its influence if its field of usefulness could be further extended, and he hoped that the results of this Fair would be in every way satisfactory.

The boys and girls of the Home then appeared on the stage and sang the "Star Spangled Banner," after which the exercises attendant upon the formal opening closed.

BOSTON.

Mr. Fechter Retires from the Management of the Globe Theatre—His Published Letter—Mr. Chanfrau on his Benefit—Mr. Fechter's Next in Danger—His Differences with Mr. J. W. Wallack.

From Our Own Correspondent.

BOSTON, Thursday, Dec. 15, 1870.

The troubles which have long been brewing at the Globe Theatre have reached their culmination, and Mr. CHARLES FECHTER has retired from the management. This intention he announces in a letter which was published this afternoon, and as it gives a brief history of the causes that have led to the disastrous termination of one of the grandest and most promising theatrical schemes ever inaugurated in this country, I reproduce it in full. It will be read in New-York by the friends of Mr. CHANFRAU and Mr. WALLACK with peculiar interest, their personal relations with Mr. FECHTER being of the kind that the public are too fond of making the subject of gossip and scandal. The letter is as follows:

GLOBE THEATRE, MANAGER'S OFFICE, BOSTON, Dec. 14, 1870.

To the Editor of the Traveller:

SIR: Will you, who have, in your eloquent notice of the 6th inst., so clearly defined the state of things at the Globe Theatre, continue the somewhat ungracious task of speaking the truth, by giving place, in the columns of your valued paper, to these few reminiscences of a management I am—notwithstanding the prayers of, and my sincere affection for, my friend CHENEY—bound to resign?

Let me, first, begin at the end! This is the last thing at hand: an elegant note, just received from Mr. F. S. CHANFRAU; a charming specimen of what a straight-minded manager is to expect from a certain class of people (luckily rare in the profession) when he attempts to repress disorderly examples and ruinous behavior toward the enterprise it is the duty and the pride of all true artists to help and support:

PARKER HOUSE, BOSTON, Dec. 13, 1870.

SIR: It has come to my knowledge, that on a recent occasion, at the Globe Theatre, when you presumed to address to my wife, certain remarks of a spectral in their nature, and utterly unworthy of a gentleman. Respect for the family whose hospitality you thus grossly soiled restrains me from expressing the contempt with which you have inspired me, by tweaking your nose in public, but I take the first and only opportunity your cowardly seclusion of your closet presents to place immediately available, it is saying upon my personal responsibility that I think you are what your conduct indicates you to be, a Gross blackguard. I shall be at this hotel until five this evening when I propose to return to Long Branch, New-Jersey. Obediently yours F. S. CHANFRAU

TO CHAS FECHTER 84 James Hotel Boston Mass.

The above letter, which I have given correction of interesting spelling, speaks for itself. With regard to the question of gentlemanliness between Mr. CHANFRAU and myself, I leave others to judge, and will content myself by saying simply that one clause of Mr. CHANFRAU's letter, to the effect that I have greatly soiled the hospitality of any gentleman, is untrue, for in the house of the gentleman referred to (undoubtedly Mr. ARTHUR CHENEY) I always have been and am received as one of the family; and Mr. CHENEY has too much manhood to receive in his house as a guest, one who has soiled his hospitality; and if you will for one moment consider that since this time I claimed Mr. CHANFRAU's hand, before his departure from Boston, and his wife begged my leave—immediately granted—to accompany him to New-York (whence she only returned to decline the performance of her duties,) I neither have spoken to, met or seen the lady—you can form a notion of what is the real blackguard" in the matter, and pronounce for yourself.

But let it pass; and let me come to a far more serious and painful duty: That of putting in a true light, the falsified correspondence, the invented rights and wrongs, given to the editor of the New-York Sun (Mr. HOWARD told me, himself) by a certain actor, I believed loved and treated as a brother: I name Mr. JAMES W. WALLACK. His right to refuse "any part he chooses to decline," is imaginary indeed; and I give below, as undeniable proof, the stipulations made by WALLACK himself, and copied from his own handwriting:

ASTOR HOUSE, March 23, 1870.

J. H. Selwyn, Esq.

MY DEAR SELWYN: Your telegram received. I simply write recapitulating our conversation. I will engage with you for Selwyn's Theatre, Boston, for the next week, my salary to be $ per week—my name to be used for a benefit for the theatre, I waiving all right and interest in it; the accompanying play to be given, and for which I shall receive a clear half of the gross receipts. I am to dress in a room by myself, and in all new plays produced my costumes to be provided by the management. I am to act seven times in the week, if necessary, but any performance beyond that number to be paid for pro rata. It is not necessary to multiply stipulations, as your intention is evidently honorable in the matter, and my intention is to serve the interests of the management.

Let me hear from you, that we perfectly understand each other, and in the hope that our future mutual relations may prove harmonious,

Believe me, yours very truly,

J. W. WALLACK.

My best regards to Mr. CHENEY.

This letter is indorsed on the back in the handwriting of Mr. JOHN H. SELWYN: "J. W. WALLACK, March 26, 1870. Ans., March 28, 1870, recapitulating terms and concluding engagement."

No other stipulations nor rights reserved—and this is signed, "J. W. WALLACK."

This said and understood, let me state facts: WALLACK was given the part of Don Sallusta, (a fearing part, by the way, which he knew he had to play from the day of our first meeting;) he kept it for five days; came to the theatre on salary day; talked with me, on the stage; never alluded to the part in any way; and, instead of addressing me, the stage-manager, (Mr. ARTHUR LECLERCQ,) or the manager, on the subject, walked quietly off, leaving in the hands of the door-keeper the book of Ruy Blas confided to him, enclosed in this brief note:

MY DEAR FECHTER: I do not like Don Sallusta at all, and would rather not assume the part.

I return the book, therefore; and am,

Yours truly, J. W. WALLACK.

To which, though greatly moved by the offensive proceeding, I replied:

MY DEAR WALLACK: I fear you have entirely mistaken the application made for the part of Don Sallusta. The book was not sent you for approval, but for study. I would no more think of asking your sanction for casting you in Don Sallusta than I would beg leave to cast you for Joseph Surface.

I regret to hear you do like the part at all. It is the best part of the play, and much rather act it than the part of Ruy Blas (an experiment we can try, if you like, by alternating characters.)

But, should you still decline to assume the part, please consider your services useless, and your engagement at an end, from this date.

In the hope you will reconsider the question in a reasonable spirit, and give me a satisfactory reply,

I remain, dear WALLACK, yours truly,

CHARLES FECHTER.

To this firm, but friendly-intended appeal, leaving all doors open for a sensible and conscientious return, I received the following answer:

SIR: No other prefix need I employ, after your peremptory note of this date.

I will not enter into any argument as to Don Sallusta, or any other part; but I simply reply to your edict, "That your services are useless, and your engagement at an end, from this date."

Please understand that I am engaged to Mr. Arthur Cheney, and not to you. An engagement made before you were considered.

I do not recognize your right to tell me my services are not required; nor will I permit Mr. CHENEY to stultify himself by acceding to and supporting you in usurping that right. I thought was perfectly understood between gentlemen.

My position in the Globe Theatre ought to be understood—and that position I intend to maintain, if I can.

Any further communication I may have with Mr. Cheney, with whom I negotiated, to whom I look for the fulfilment of my engagement, and with whom alone I will have, in the future, any correspondence.

J. W. WALLACK.

This is the whole, plain and candid truth. Let the public, the Press and my friends judge and decide. It was clearly my intention not to have considered the services of Mr. WALLACK useless to the theatre, provided he would have acted in the same kind and friendly spirit to me that I would have acted to him. I consider that I have acted the part of a true artist toward him, in my written proposition, which was unmistakable, in offering to alternate with him the parts of Don Sallusta and Ruy Blas. Mr. WALLACK's services to the theatre, it will readily be admitted, would prove useless should he do nothing but go to the box-office every Monday morning and demand his weekly stipend without giving anything in return.

I had no other views in assuming the management of the Globe Theatre (as a great pecuniary loss to me) than the benefit of art, the wholesome amusement of the public, and the pride and comfort of my hearty friend, CHENEY. The experiment is proving tediously pecuniary loss in the mean and petty, jealous circle I have to work in; continually attacked by a clique no gentleman can face; and, as I have no mortal reason for turning my poor self into a modern Hercules, to carry the globe on my shoulders, I beg leave to retire, bowing my heartfelt thanks to the public, friends of the Press, and patrons, for the valuable and sustained support they have given me during my too short stay in a city I considered like my own home.

I now beg leave to announce the last four weeks of the present management, and of Miss LECLERCQ's and my performance in Boston.

CHARLES FECHTER.

The retirement of Mr. FECHTER from the Globe Theatre is almost the sole topic of conversation, and it has created a most unwonted excitement. The future plans of Mr. CHENEY, with reference to his theatre, are of course not yet known, but it is rumored that he will offer the management to Mr. F. S. CHANFRAU; that Mrs. CHANFRAU will return to the position of leading lady, and that Mr. WALLACK will remain as leading man. OAKHAM.

WASHINGTON.

The Amnesty Question Before Both Houses of Congress—A Lively Debate on Butler's Bill in the House—Speech of Carl Schurz in the Senate—Absurd Rumor of Cabinet Changes—A Solution for the Mormon Problem—Receptions and Balls at the Capital.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—The debate in the House, today, on the Amnesty bill, only confirmed the impressions foreshadowed yesterday, that no bill for amnesty will be passed at this session. Evidently, Congress is not ready for complete amnesty, and the opponents of a restrictive measure, such as Gen. BUTLER's bill is, are probably strong enough to prevent the passage of anything but a universal bill. Many members would vote for a bill to remove legal disabilities only, but a partial measure will certainly be opposed by all the Democrats and some Republicans, who, with the Republicans opposed to any amnesty at the present time, are probably able to decide the question in the negative. The division of opinion among Republicans on this subject is precisely parallel with that which existed among the Republicans of Missouri as portrayed by Senator SCHURZ in his speech today, and as it seems to be certain that Republicans will vote on this question just as their individual consciences dictate, which was what the Missouri Republican Convention resolved they might do, the analogy, to hold good, would seem to require that the handful of Republicans in the House who favor universal amnesty, should bolt the party and unite with the Democrats, as Mr. SCHURZ did. The most conspicuous feature of the debate today was the speech of Mr. COX, of New-York, who was humorous, tragical, dramatical, scriptural, irreverent, ironical, classical, historical, biographical and mythological by turns. Jurisprudence, history, the bible, the classics, mythology, and the drama, were all drawn upon with a free hand, and the comical feature was not neglected. He confessed to a dream last night in the vision of which BUTLER appeared as a central figure—first in the attitude of a suppliant for mercy, then in the joyous refrain as one of the forgiven. It was very well drawn, and though somewhat irreverent was very well received. He opposed the bill, as did Messrs. FARNSWORTH and BARRY, because it is incomplete, and as did Messrs. LAWRENCE and MAYNARD, because it goes too far.

CARL SCHURZ'S SPEECH.

Years ago a Senator from Connecticut introduced a resolution into the Senate which conferred immortality on the names of two men, by connecting them with the name of a third, whose fame was already secure. Whether the Schurz resolution will make any such permanent impression as the Foote resolution, cannot be foretold, but the speech of its author, Mr. SCHURZ, has claimed almost universal attention today. The Senate galleries were well filled at an early hour with an audience more than usually fine. A large number of Representatives came over from the House; the reporters' gallery gathered all its proper occupants, and many who never assert a claim to a seat there except on occasions of great interest, were present. Nearly all the Senators were in their seats. As the morning hour drew to a close, the patience of the assemblage was tried for a moment by an attempt of Mr. HOWE to prevail upon Mr. SCHURZ to delay the delivery of his speech till to-morrow, that the war claim debated yesterday might be decided, but this proposal met with little favor, and at 1:05 o'clock the great Missouri dateckionist opened his portfolio, displaying a great mass of manuscript, and addressed the President. For two hours and a half Mr. SCHURZ held the great audience to his words with close and silent attention. For two hours and a half the Senators, with a few exceptions, passed entirely to write letters or read newspapers. Mr. SCHURZ sketched the political condition of Missouri, and discussed for a time the pledge in the Republican platform of 1868 in regard to amnesty. He then gave his version of the nominating Convention in Missouri, and the causes which led to a portion of the party leaving that Convention. He explained his relations to the Administration. The last part of his speech was devoted to the consideration of national politics. He denied that revenue reform was an issue in the Missouri election, repudiated the idea of his going over to the Democratic Party, and spoke at length of the prospects of a new party. Instead of the formation of a new party, he desired an advance in the position of the Republican Party. Some parts of Mr. SCHURZ's description of the means used by his opponents to carry the election were humorous and sarcastic. His reference to the removal from the registration lists of the name of one Mr. ROLLINS, whose election as Governor his colleague (Mr. DRAKE) had opposed in 1867, on the ground that it would be dangerous to slavery, created laughter that the Speaker's gavel had to silence. The discussion will not, probably, cease on the resolution with the reply of Mr. DRAKE, to-morrow. The resolution and speech of Mr. SCHURZ both find little favor with the Republican Senators. Some regard the speech as a blunder, and most as impolitic, though all concede its ability. As far as the resolution goes beyond the Fourteenth Amendment in granting general amnesty, it evidently finds but a trifling support in the Senate. Whether the resolution will be voted down squarely cannot now be accurately predicted. It certainly will not be passed, unless the sentiment of the Senate is far different from what it appears. It may, like the Foote resolution, linger before the Senate for some time, and develop results not now foreseen; but however the merits of the subject may be regarded by individuals, the truth cannot be denied that, for the moment at least, it has attracted a great deal of attention. Mrs. Secretary FISH sat in the diplomatic gallery, and paid close attention to the whole of Mr. SCHURZ's speech.

GEN. SCHENCK AND THE ENGLISH MISSION.

Gen. SCHENCK will be nominated as Minister to England before Congress adjourns for the holidays. He has already signified his acceptance, but the period of his departure is not yet fixed.

THE CHARGES AGAINST FERRY FULLER.

The dispatch from New-Orleans stating that FERRY FULLER did not appear in answer to the charge against him, and that Judge DURELL had ordered his rearrest, should be explained by saying that Mr. FULLER is at his residence in this city dangerously ill from heart disease. He was taken last Saturday night, and was in convulsions for fifteen hours, almost constantly. His condition now is more favorable, but still precarious. The charge against Mr. FULLER, it will be remembered, is maladministration in the New-Orleans Custom-house.

APPROPRIATIONS.

The Pension Appropriation bill was reported from the Committee today by Mr. KELSEY, and the Naval bill will be reported to-morrow. The fact that the estimates this year are so closely in accord with the appropriations of last year, which were cut down unsparingly, renders the work of mature ing the bills far less laborious than heretofore. It is probable that the Committee will not be obliged to sit during the Holidays.

CLASSIFICATION OF SUGAR.

The very difficulties foretold by Mr. ALLISON and others in the debate on the sugar classification of the revised tariff last July, have already compelled the Secretary of the Treasury and the Committee of Ways and Means to ask that the old classification by numbers and colors, on the Dutch standard system, be restored. The Secretary of the Treasury, the sugar men from New-York and Boston, and Government appraisers, were all present before the Committee today, and the frauds attending the importation of sugars under the present classification were fully shown up, so fully, indeed, that Mr. HOOPER was authorized to report the bill elsewhere given, which he did during the afternoon, with the statement that he should call it up for action to-morrow, as the Secretary of the Treasury deemed it so important that he wanted it passed before the Holidays. The change consists in striking out the words "raw Muscovado" in each classification, so as to leave the grading entirely by color under the Dutch standard. It will bring in a certain class of clayed sugars a little lower and a class of centrifugal dried sugars a little higher.

POSTAL TELEGRAPH.

The special Committee on the Postal Telegraph held their first meeting today, and again heard the exhaustive arguments of Mr. GARDINER G. HUBBARD of Boston, who consumed the entire session of the Committee, and even then did not conclude. He will be further heard at the next meeting, if the Committee do not get exhausted themselves.

ABSURD RUMORS AFLOAT.

A batch of absurd Cabinet rumors prevailed on the street last night, which were too absurd to allude to by telegraph, but this morning they seemed to have a fresh foot-hold, and centre upon Mr. BOUTWELL's speedy retirement, with reasons therefor certain. Despite the fact that the Secretary was about his business as usual, and even at the Capitol a large part of the day with the sugar men, and the further fact that the report was laughed at in the White House, yet it would stick, and it was reiterated until Senators themselves half believed it, and some of the correspondents got into a flurry of excitement in their efforts to get at the bottom of it. It finally evaporated completely.

MORNING RECEPTIONS.

Mr. and Mrs. CHARLES ASTOR BRISTED gave today the second of a series of delightful morning receptions which they have inaugurated for the Winter. Mr. and Mrs. BRISTED have set an example that will surely be followed by other wealthy and educated families of Northern cities, of opening a house in Washington for the Winter, and, by hospitality and culture, aid materially to improve the tone of society and increase the attractions of a Winter residence here.

GRAND CHARITY BALL.

Next Monday night Washington will have its season's ball sensation by a grand charity ball at Masonic Temple, under the patronage of the principal permanent and transient residents, and the immediate and energetic direction of Mrs. Gen. SHERMAN, whose labors in behalf of charitable objects seems to be unceasing. Ladies are not expected to wear calico, but they are expected each to bring a calico pattern.

A SOLUTION FOR THE MORMON PROBLEM.

Senator HENRY WILSON, of Massachusetts, proposes a mode of settling the Mormon question which is very simple, and which would doubtless prove effective. The Senator, yesterday, offered an amendment to the Cullom bill, providing for the election, in Utah, under regulations to be prescribed by the Governor of that Territory, of delegates to a convention to form a State Constitution, this Convention to be required to adopt, among other things, an ordinance, irrevocable without the consent of the United States, prohibiting the contracting of any bigamous or polygamous marriage. After the ratification of said State Constitution, if such a State Constitution should be ratified by the voters of Utah, and also prove agreeable to the Forty-second Congress, that body may admit the State of Utah to the national councils. It is claimed by Rev. Dr. NEWMAN, and others who are more or less familiar with the Mormon problem, that the practice of polygamy is now confined almost exclusively to the old Mormons; that there have been but few polygamous marriages contracted during the last year; that a majority of the voters in Utah are ready to give up "plural marriages" hereafter if they can be assured that those who have already entered upon relations of that character will not be punished; and that the opportunity of making Utah a State would be altogether too tempting to the people to be lost, even if BRIGHAM should pronounce against Statehood on such terms. It is claimed that outside of the social question, the ability of Utah to sustain the dignity of a State, is more ample than that of any other Territory. Her taxable property is very considerable, and of a permanent character, and her resources great. Her people claim a population of 140,000, although the census marshals have enumerated but 90,000. Her prospects of rapid increase are very flattering. Oregon and Nebraska were each admitted with much less than 90,000; Colorado, with but 40,000, escaped admission only by JOHNSON's veto, and Nevada, admitted in 1864, has now only 42,000 people.

MR. REVELS TO MAKE A SPEECH.

Mr. REVELS introduced a bill into the Senate today to aid in the construction and repairs of the Mississippi levees, and announced his intention of submitting some remarks on the subject at an early day.

PETITION OF ENVELOPE MAKERS.

Mr. RAMSEY presented a petition of envelope manufacturers against the preparation and sale of stamped envelopes by the Government, because of the public competition with their private business.

THE SENATE IN EXECUTIVE SESSION.

At the close of Senator SCHURZ's speech the Senate went into Executive Session. A few confirmations to minor offices were made. Gen. PLEASONTON's name was favorably reported from the Committee, but action was not taken today. It is not doubted that he will be confirmed.

ILLNESS OF MR. BROOKS.

Hon. JAMES BROOKS, of New-York, has been absent from the House some days, in consequence of a severe and dangerous cold.

BOSTON, Dec. 15.—STEPHEN TILTON and ROBERT B. STORER, well known merchants of this city, died today.

CRUSHED TO DEATH.

Four Persons Killed by the Falling of a New Building.

Men, Women and Children Buried Beneath the Ruins.

Rescuing the Survivors—Heroism of a Woman.

Intense Excitement in the Neighborhood.

Conduct of the Owner of the Building.

About 2½ o'clock yesterday morning, four persons were instantly killed and several others injured by the falling of a new building in West Thirty-fifth-street, near Tenth-avenue, the property of JOSEPH P. HALL, of No. 449 West Thirty-fourth-street, doing business as a broker at No. 20 Broad-street.

On the 14th of November last, HIRAM COCHRAN, a builder, under a contract with HALL, began the erection of a building to cover the lots No. 514 West Thirty-sixth-street and No. 523 West Thirty-fifth-street, being 25 feet front, 100 feet deep, eight stories in height, with walls 16 inches thick at the base, to top out to 12 inches above. The building of this immense structure progressed with great rapidity, but not without causing great alarm to the occupants of the houses adjacent, all of which were low, being not more than two or three stories, and as those masses of loosely-laid bricks towered higher and higher above them, saw in them the shadow of death. At last the builder himself became alarmed before the walls were more than half up, and fearing that if he went in person his motives might be misconstrued, sent his foreman to the man HALL, to remonstrate with that person against the flimsy character of the walls being up by his order. The foreman afterward reported to Mr. COCHRAN that he had seen HALL, and told him that in the judgment of competent mechanics the walls were too weak to stand, and that if carried up according to the plans to the full height of eighty feet, would probably fall of their own weight. To these representations HALL only answered that the plans and specifications, having been approved by the Superintendent of Buildings, the house was to be completed in strict accordance with them. COCHRAN, knowing the walls to be too thin to hold together, nevertheless obeyed these peremptory orders with such dispatch that on Friday last the completed walls towered eighty feet from the ground, and the work of putting on the roof being taken in hand, had been almost finished on Wednesday evening. The death-trap being ready, its victims next claim attention.

East of the trap, on Thirty-sixth-street, was the one-story frame blacksmith-shop of GREGORY FLYNN; in its rear a small stable, and back of this again, a two-story brick dwelling, 25 feet front by 31 deep, owned by MATHEW CAIRNS, who, with his wife, MARY, occupied a part of the second floor. On the same floor lived JOSEPH HENRY HAMILTON, with his wife, ANN, aged twenty-four years. The first floor was occupied by JOHN REILLY, with his wife, MARY, aged twenty-seven years; by JOHN MCCAFFERTY, whose family consisted of his wife, ANNE, aged thirty years, a son, ROBERT J. MCCAFFERTY, aged four a half years, a daughter, LIZZIE, aged two years, and an infant son, aged six months—of these eleven persons, all but the men HAMILTON, REILLY and MCCAFFERTY, were in the house at 2½ o'clock yesterday morning, when the east wall of the death-trap gave way in the middle, and in an instant the entire structure, except the narrow north and south walls, tumbled down like a house of cards, burying Cairns' house and all its inmates in the mass of ruins, and also crushing and closing over the stable and blacksmith-shop in front of it.

At the instant of the springing of the death-trap, JAMES BENSON, twenty-nine years old, was near the door of the blacksmith-shop and had just taken a horse's hoof up to fit a shoe when the sudden lurch of the trap caused a cry of alarm from observers in the street, and springing out the open door, the trap just grazed him, and he escaped with only a slight scratch from a brick. He was the only person in the shop, and, as the walls fell so suddenly that the horse was crushed where he stood, there was, of course, no time to warn, much less to rescue the hapless women and children. Of these hapless victims, CAIRNS and his wife had been out to a party during the night and had FALLEN FRANCE.

Predictions Realized—Causes of the Downfall—The Future—The New Government—Chances for a Republic.

From Our Own Correspondent, resident at Paris.

PARIS, Sunday, Nov. 20, 1870.

May an old grumbler raise his voice again in the columns of your paper? It would be more possible, indeed, not to raise one's voice in the midst of a drama like this. Was the Revolution ever seen? But how am I to be heard in such an uproar? How am I to penetrate the lines of fire that surrounds us? And then, how is one to collect his thoughts under the roar of thousands of cannon, of which one half unfortunately point out? How is he going to put intelligibly on paper what he wants to say, when he is trying to go and pat on the back the guns that are pointing out, and to say naughty things to those that are pointing in?

PREDICTIONS REALIZED.

A man is not always well received when he comes in at the end of a catastrophe with the common place "I told you so!" But have I not repeated over and over again in your columns, for the last ten years, that France had entered a period of decadence, that the Emperor was bringing the country into ruin, and that nothing but a great calamity could follow the system we were living under? It was difficult for this idea to penetrate the minds of men who only travelled through the country, or who, if they stopped, suspended themselves simply in the social life of the people. Everything looked so brilliant, and individual well appeared so civilized and prosperous, that it was rare to meet a man, and singularly enough, an American, who did not look upon this as tantamount before the greatness of LOUIS NAPOLEON and the prosperity of the country under his direction. And yet, in the twenty-second year of his reign, the Emperor perished but one step, as the last in most extraordinary manner cannot be appreciated by an American, and that was the liberation of Lombardy. And yet the Empire, with its luxury and corruption, and by the persistent ignorance of the peasantry, was running into decadence and barbarism as fast as it could go. A nation cannot be great which gives five hundred millions of francs in fine barracks, imperial palaces, gilded domes, grand opera-houses, and which has not a single school-house fit to show to a foreigner. A nation cannot be great which believes that the welfare of the State depends on its carrying on its shoulders such a cadavre as that of the Papal Government. A nation cannot be great which gives 200,000,000 of francs a year to support such an imbecility as the temporal power of the Pope, and refuses ten francs to contribute 100,000 francs to GUSTAVE LAMBERT for the expedition in search of the North-west passage. A nation can never progress while it persists in the old and superannuated system of centralization, by which power is concentrated in one man and in one place, and no occasion is given for the expansion of the minds of other men. A nation must be on the confines of barbarism which does not perceive the monstrous immorality of taking money out of the State Treasury, the tax contributions of the half-starved peasants of the rural districts, to pay for the "pisson wines" of M. Petitpas or the pirouettes of Mlle. Finoro on the boards of the Grand Opera.

THE FUTURE.

What hope is there of a people who pay 60,000 francs a year to a half-naked dancer, a part of which comes out of the State Treasury, and who refuse to pay more than forty francs a month to their school-teachers, under the pretext that the exercise of the chorographic art brings strangers to Paris and enriches the people—as if there were no solider way than that of founding a nation's riches! The effects of these twenty years of despotism, of centralization, of luxury for the capital and ignorance for the rural districts, are now showing themselves in blood, in shame and disaster. They are showing themselves in listlessness of character, in an alarming diminution of the moral standard, which give to the crimes of the last BONAPARTE their crowning infamy, and stand as the eternal condemnation of a despotic power. We see it now, and I claim credit for having attempted to show it to you over and over again in years gone by, that the political education of the people under the Empire was going backward instead of forward; that under the Empire we were in a blind alley, in which there was no hope and from which there was no issue, and to make Republicans we must first have the Republic. Education was not keeping pace with the requirements of the age; the brilliancy of Paris and the general appearance of prosperity on the lines of the great railways was but a mask covering a smart-looking, superficially intelligent, but priest-ridden, superstitious and narrow-minded peasantry, totally lacking the education which gives common sense, and serves as the basis of great deeds and of a great nation. It was in the nature of things that by the gradual expansion of the strong over the weak, the frontiers of France were to be overrun sooner or later, and the country taught, by a visitation of fire and sword, the source of its weakness and the remedy for its cure. The sooner, therefore, another trial of the Republic was made the better. The publication of the secret correspondence of the Tuileries was not needed to show the demoralizing influence of the system we were living under. We see this influence at every step, in all ranks of society, and it was too deeply rooted not to reach from the Empire far over into the Republic. The most deplorable of these effects, the one which gives us most anxiety for the future, is the utter want of confidence of one citizen in another. There is no other social evil that compares in magnitude to this one; no other that creates as many obstacles in the accomplishment of great deeds. What adds gravity to the fact is that the people do not perceive this evil, nor even suspect its existence. They do not see the enormity of setting one half the nation to watching the other half; and thus we see everywhere a double set of clerks—one to guard the honesty of the other. We see every man suspecting his neighbor, and ready to inform on him. We see M. DE PERSIGNY cautioning the Emperor in a letter against their mutual friend, the Prefect of Police. We have before us the deplorable example of a whole nation addicted to espionage, and we are thus let into the secret of the wonderful organization and effectiveness of the Police; every man is a natural policeman. I need not point out how much of the force of the nation is paralyzed, and its material progress impeded by this. It is to be hoped, useless, and certainly immoral, division of the nation into the watchers and the watched.

THE NEW GOVERNMENT.

In the new Government there is then the same tendency to centralization as in the old. The want of confidence in each other is at the bottom of this evil; no man is considered safe when out of sight. Is this a characteristic of the Latin race, or is it the result of the long reign of despotism and espionage under which we have lived? In any case it is the darkest problem the new man and the new order of things will have to deal with. In the new Government there is the same love of forms as in the old. Every man who holds a bit of power, from the Governor down to the lowest Mayor or Sub-Prefect, must put into operation the abstract or purely philosophical or insane ideas he has been preaching in secret concerning his disciples for the last twenty years; but fortunately for the State, they are allowed to die as soon as launched, and are soon recalled. Nevertheless, this disposition of each man to act for himself and to force his own ideas and his own laws on the public is not one of the least of the first embarrassments of the new Republic. We still have arbitrary arrests for differences of opinion, a persistence in the idea that the people belong to the office-holders, instead of the office-holders to the people, and the fatal inclination of imposing opinions rather by force and by secrecy and secret manœuvres than by the ballot and free discussion.

CHANCES FOR A REPUBLIC.

This want of grandeur and largeness in the French character almost makes us despair for the moment of the Republic. But then we must recollect that so rapid and radical a transition is a very serious affair, entitled to the largest indulgence from the rest of the world. We must recollect that we Americans, especially, are born republicans, and cannot help ourselves, and that it is a greater merit to change into a republican than to be born one. Perhaps if we had to transform ourselves as suddenly, we would also stumble and flounder, and do foolish things, before falling into the right channel. Let us, therefore, be indulgent for the French, and hope and pray that after wading through the accumulated evils of the late deplorable Empire, and after ridding themselves by experience of the difficulties that surround and embarrass the new order of things, they will come out cleansed and purified, and capable of founding and maintaining the only form of government which can ever give the genuine greatness they aspire to.

MALAKOFF.

Separatist Movements Throughout the Republic.

The Paris Patrie recently, comments, with much indignation, upon the proceedings of various bodies in the Provinces, which, it says, greatly impede the national defense. As a moment when every effort is being made to liberate the capital from the grasp of the enemy, a separatist agitation has sprung up in several great towns of the south and south-west, which causes great embarrassment to the Government. Attempts are being made to establish a Southern Lecarte and one of the south-west, which, notwithstanding the protestations of their promoters can only end in the disintegration of the country. A Toulouse paper publishes a summary of the proceedings at four meetings of one of these bodies, in one of which, it is stated, that, "seeing it is impossible to organize and co-ordinate all the democratic forces of Southern France, in order to exercise a powerful and constant action upon the central power and the departmental authorities, and with the view of furnishing them with the means of consolidating and preserving the Republic, and of fortifying the Government against the enemies, within and without, the League of the South-west, assembled at Toulouse, a popular meeting on Nov. 20 and 21, 1870, adopts the following resolutions: Article 1. Resistance à outrance, and the dispatch of civil commissaries to Paris, to Tours, to the armies in the field and in besieged places, or those likely to be besieged. 2. Abolition of octroi duties and all indirect taxes, which, contrary to democratic principle, press most heavily upon the classes which are both most numerous and least wealthy, and, without prejudging the question, the substitution of an equitable or a proportionate tax upon incomes above fifty francs. 3. Dissolution of the municipal councils, councils of arrondissements, and municipal commissions which were elected under the Empire, and are still in existence. 4. Dissolution of the clergy, that is to say, of the jesuits, in order to effect the reforms judged to be necessary by the unanimity of republicans. 5. Dismissal of all functionaries of every description who have distinguished themselves under the fallen régime by their dynastic zeal—and particularly the Maires, Juges de Paix, Recteurs de l'Academie, Recteurs, Inspecteurs d'Academie and Elementary Schools. 6. The substitution of lay teachers for clerical municipal teachers. 7. Exclusion from all public employment of all servants of the former Government. 8. Reconstruction upon a democratic basis of the Chambers of Commerce, Bienfaisances, societies for mutual assistance, and the directing bodies of hospitals, which have hitherto employed, and which continue to make use of, for monarchical and clerical ends, the funds intrusted to their control. 9. The establishment in each department of a permanent tribunal, to judge the trial of the official and extra-official accomplices of the blow in the dark of December, and of the long series of crimes committed by LOUIS NAPOLEON BONAPARTE; to place under immediate sequestration, on the day of manifest judgment, all the property of any such accomplice, of any who took part in the attempt of the 2d of December, and drove France to war. 10. Complete separation of Church and State." In order to carry out these objects "the League of the South-west will invite the leagues of the South and the East, to which it has given the initiative, to unite with it, and will urge the formation of similar leagues in the centre, the West, and the North, which, together, will form the United Leagues of France. The League of the South-west will be represented by a permanent central committee, which will correspond with the delegates of the committees, composed of delegates from the arrondissements. A delegation from the Central League will be sent to the Government at Tours whenever political circumstance may require." It is added, "the delegates of the League will set out today for Tours in order to present to the members of the Provisional Government the resolutions adopted by the meeting." The Patrie denounces this movement as an attempt at radical revolution and usurpation, which it relies upon the firmness of the Government and of the established authorities to resist.

NEW MAGAZINES.

—The current Harper's is rich in substance and variety. This magazine is long likely to occupy a foremost place in public favor. One of the clearest accounts that we have seen, and made doubly clear by well-chosen illustration, is given of the "Passion Play at Oberammergau, in 1870." The article will be welcome to numbers who have sought a full description of this strange drama, since it furnishes its history, as well as a graphic view of the present manner of its performance. "The Voice of Christmas Past" is a cleverly-managed sketch for the season, in which DICKENS is made the central figure, with his favorite characters grouped about him. Few people know much about everyday life in Sweden, although the novels of FREDERIKA BREMER and others have afforded some glimpses of it; but "Folk Life in Sweden," in a small compass packs a world of quaint information on the subject not easily found elsewhere. A very tender and pathetic piece of versification is Mr. R. H. STODDARD's "Blind." We would gladly see more of Mr. STODDARD's work than he gives us, for our native poets are few and far between. Another good poem in the number is that entitled "The Ancient Lady of Sorrow." "Fredericks the Great," is continued in this number, and as are "Anne Furness" and "Anteros," and each installment no doubt will be read by thousands with unflagging interest. "The Young Naturalist in Mexico," and "The Dolliver Family," should be received with delight by young folks of various ages, and Miss PHŒBE CARY's "The Christmas Sheaf" will be acceptable to all. The paper on "Our Public Lands" is exceedingly well put together and contains much valuable information on a subject that ought to be familiar to all Americans and to all intending immigrants. This article should be republished in full in Europe, and probably will be. Harper's contains several other choice contributions, the bare enumeration of which would occupy much space, and the favorite departments at the end including the "Easy Chair," and the "Drawer," will sustain the reputation that has long made them "household words." Altogether, the present number of Harper's is one of rare merit, even for a magazine of its high character; and it would be difficult to go further or to say more in the way of deserved panegyric.

—The December Galaxy contains some very good articles, and a few which it would be hard to praise. To begin with the worst, "The Portrait," as it is called, of King WILLIAM, with its accompanying text, is a curiously pointless and dreary attempt at humor. When poor DICKEY, in his assumed character of "John Phœnix," issued the San Diego Herald and originated a form of illustration since widely imitated, there was always method in his madness, and a genuine vein of satire beneath the surface of crude absurdity. Thus, when he represented a Californian city by a straight row of the little cuts used in country papers as headings for notices "to let," there was something to laugh at. The habit of vamping up any old blocks that happened to be in a printing office to illustrate passing events—especially in California, where printers' stock was scarce—was hit off happily enough, and the joke, without being very startling, gave just the kind of diversion for which it was intended. This is exactly what the "Portrait of William III." does not do. It is surprising that the editors, who have proved themselves to be men of taste, should disfigure their magazine with such folly. Mr. JUDITH MCCARTHY continues his well-written story of "Lady Judith" in this number, and also contributes a strong but somewhat prejudiced portrait of M. THIERS. Mr. GIDEON WELLES furnishes an elaborate statement in relation to the reinforcement of Fort Pickens in the Spring of 1861. It is a paper destined to provoke a great deal of controversy. "The Man who Didn't" is a pleasant sketch by Mr. EDGAR FAWCETT, and "Types of American Beauty," by Mr. JUDITH H. BROWNE, is interesting, although the portrait to which it relates is very badly done. Besides these papers, Mrs. EDWARDS begins a new tale, "Ought We to Visit Her?" which promises briskly, and Mr. DE FOREST continues his journey "Overland," which rather drags. A realistic sketch called "Some Recollections of an Old Woman," a few tolerable verses, and the usual entertaining collection of miscellaneous matter at the end as the Galaxy usually supplies, make up what seems noteworthy in the rest of the number.

CURRENT NOTES.

A new daily journal at Fort Dodge is called The Cardiff Giant.

An Indian boy and twenty-one head of cattle were lately lost during a snow-storm in Nevada.

A movement is on foot at Baltimore looking to the early revival of the ship-building interest in that city.

Six persons, who had each attained the age of ninety years, died at Providence, R. I., last month.

The Collinsville Manufacturing Company of Connecticut has reduced the wages of the operatives thirty-three per cent, since the first of the month, without causing a strike.

There are 208 manufacturing establishments in the city and county of Albany, which use a capital of $6,844,000, and pay $2,222,264 per annum in wages.

The Swedes, who settled to the number of 100 in Water Valley, Miss., last May, complain of the climate, and now desire to remove elsewhere.

A colony of Shakers is about being established in Wayne County, Mich. Two brothers from Lebanon, have lately been prospecting in that region with the view of purchasing the necessary lands.

A suit has been commenced by a florist, at Boston, to recover damages from a dentist for the loss of his wife through the carelessness of the latter in having permitted her to inhale too much nitrous oxyde gas.

The Vessel-owners' and Captains' Association, of Pennsylvania, recently assembled at Philadelphia, and resolved that the interests of commerce demand that a reduction shall be made in the taxes levied on articles used in the building of American ships.

A Sedalia business firm have just commenced a suit against the authorities of that city to recover $21,000 for loss sustained through the burning of a brewery. The claim is based upon the insufficiency or inactivity of the Sedalia Fire Department.

The Louisville, Ky., Society of Spiritualists have published a communication, protesting against the cavalier manner in which the ministers of the various denominations in that city have treated them, and inviting a public discussion on the question of spiritual phenomena.

As an evidence of the progress of the temperance movement in Maine since 1826, the Lewiston Journal declares that a man may travel the whole length of the State and seek "decent society" without meeting an intoxicated person, or smelling the poisoned breath of a man who uses liquor.

At the Maryland Immigration Convention, held at Baltimore on Tuesday last, a resolution was passed appointing a committee to draw up a petition asking the State Legislature for an appropriation of $200,000, to be used in encouraging European emigration.

An Auburn, Me., land-owner recently took an effectual way of showing his dissatisfaction with the city's award for damages on account of a new road across his land. He had the officials arrested for trespass so late on Saturday night that it was only by the merest chance they escaped spending the Sabbath in prison.

Butler County, Kansas, appears to be given up altogether to mob law. The lives of several respectable citizens have been sacrificed, and at Douglass some 175 men have been formed into a military organization, with the avowed object of clearing the county of horse thieves, but in reality to continue to terrify the people with acts of lawlessness.

Miss LOTTIE FOWLER, the spirit medium, who was recently tried and acquitted of witchcraft at Bridgeport, Conn., it seems had no sooner escaped the clutches of the law than she fell into the hands of a sharper, who—on the pretense of sympathy—induced her to give a public seance, at which he acted in the capacity of ticket agent. Nearly 1,000 persons attended, but at the close of the manifestations neither the Colonel nor the proceeds could anywhere be found.

Prof. SMITH, of Baltimore, in a recent communication on the subject of hydrophobia, says that as the virus, or poison which propagates the fatal malady, exists in the saliva of the rabid animal, a mere scratch on the hand or face is more dangerous than if a deep incision had been made by the teeth, as in the latter case the flow of blood would be likely to assist in carrying off the poison. The Professor advises that the wound or wounds be instantly washed again and again with soap and water to prevent the possibility of any poison adhering. Caustic potash should then be applied for about a quarter of a minute, and be followed by a poultice of bread and milk, the latter to be continued for two days.

An individual named HUNTER, who finds delight in looking through key-holes and other obscure places, was rewarded the other night at Toledo, Ohio, by seeing several pieces of candle lighting in such a way at the house of ex-colored Chaplain GARLAND H. WHITE, formerly of the Twenty-eighth United States Colored Volunteers, as to give the impression that the building was being fired on purpose. The flames burst forth soon afterward, and one of the pieces of candle described by HUNTER having been discovered, WHITE was taken from his bed and lodged in prison to answer a charge of arson. WHITE was once the slave of the rebel TOOMBS, and was among the first to enter Richmond after the surrender of LEE.

At the leveling of an ancient Indian mound near St. Louis, Mo., a few days ago, a very interesting spectacle was presented. Among those who witnessed it were Prof. MARSH, of Yale College, Dr. BRIGGS, of St. Louis, and Gen. A. J. SMITH. The mound was originally forty feet in height, oval in shape, and about 300 feet in length. About twenty years ago there was a house on top of it, and a grave-yard on the side. During the progress of the work the laborers have dug up the bones of three races, first those of the whites, second, of the Indians, and last of the ancient mound builders. Prof. MARSH secured thirty skulls of the mound builders, one alone being perfect. These were found in two vaults, one a square structure, the other of crescent form, and both about fifty feet across.

Lucky Ostrom's Estate—Some Errors Corrected by "An Old Citizen" of Cincinnati.

To the Editor of the Cincinnati Commercial:

I notice, under head of special telegram from New-York, in your paper of today, an article in regard to the estate of RACHEL OSTROM. It has many errors in it. I propose to correct a few of them.

It is true that JAMES W. GAELAY in the forepart of the present century was engaged to be married to Miss RACHEL OSTROM, of Poughkeepsie, in the State of New-York. Mr. J. W. GAELAY desired to marry her and move West. The mother of Miss OSTROM would not go West, and Miss OSTROM would not leave her mother. J. W. GAELAY came West and located at Cincinnati, Ohio, and afterward went back to New-York, but could not induce Miss OSTROM to come to the West, and, shortly after, he married MARTHA RANDALL, of New-York, who came to this city with him. By that marriage J. W. GAELAY had one child—HULDAH, married to THORNTON A. MILLS, a Presbyterian clergyman of this city.

After the death of Mr. GAELAY's first wife he married REBECCA, a daughter of ELMORE WILLIAMS, by whom he had three children. One of them died in its infancy. WILLIAM ELMORE GAELAY, another child, died after age in Florida. ALLEN W. GAELAY, a child, is living and doing well in the western part of the city, and J. W. GAELAY is not dead yet, but is living with his son, and is in remarkably good health and preservation for a man of his age. J. W. GAELAY never was imprisoned for contempt of Court. He said at one time to the Court, then composed of three Judges, of which the father of our worthy Mayor was one of the number, that it was a Demerara team, composed of two mules and a jackass, which remark he made in the heat of an argument, and himself and the Judges were always personal friends, and it had nothing whatever to do with his election to Congress.

In about the year 1822, WM. HENRY HARRISON was a candidate for Congress in the Cincinnati District; the mechanics and working men generally, for HARRISON was a representative of the Virginia aristocracy, opposed his election, and resolved to run a candidate of their own, and appointed a committee to select a candidate, of which Mr. B. HORSWELL, then a wagon-maker, was the Chairman. Mr. GAELAY consented to run, without any expectation on his part or the part of the Committee that he would be elected. He declined to be a candidate a second time. He and Gen. HARRISON were always warm personal and political friends, and in 1840 Mr. GAELAY canvassed two States for the election of Gen. HARRISON to the Presidency.

AN OLD CITIZEN.

THE NEW-YORK POST-OFFICE.

Our City Mail System—Why So Many Letters Are Lost—A. T. Stewart & Co.'s Mail Arrangement.

Beyond the fact that the New-York Post-office is one of the largest in the world, and the most important in this country, the general public have little conception of the vastness of its work and the complexity of its system. When it is considered that between 120 and 180 tons per day is the average weight of matter handled by the 800 employes, and that more than 300,000 letters, and often a much larger number of newspapers are dexterously disposed of during each twenty-four hours, some idea of the subject may be obtained. But of the thousand and one items and incidents connected with the postal work, very few are aware. The increase of mail matter received, delivered, or transmitted through this office is enormous, and has thus far outstripped all calculations. The estimated ratio of this growth is about five per cent. per annum. The accommodations, although repeatedly enlarged—latterly at frequent intervals—have been greatly deficient. The latest change was made this week, by an addition to the gallery, and the rearrangement of furniture and partitions, which throws the total interior of the old building into one great hall, with improved light and ventilation. This affords ample space to conduct all the mailing work on two floors under the constant supervision of the Assistant Postmaster. The growth of the foreign business is very rapid. Last week, in two days, 30,000 letters, filling 150 sacks and weighing nearly 11,000 pounds, were mailed to various foreign lands. Some of these letters are destined to the most remote places upon the globe—the Azore Islands, Hindostan, Australia, Japan, Celebrita and Madagascar. Strange as it may seem, it is a fact that the proportion of missives lost, mis-sent, misdirected, or tampered with, is much less in the foreign than in the domestic department. The number of complaints constantly made about the detention, miscarriage or loss of other letters, is very great. Most of these, too, come from business men who are supposed to exercise more than ordinary care in the matter. But instances are of daily occurrence where the most surprising carelessness is evident on the part of banks and large concerns, and thousands of dollars' worth of inclosures are exposed to peril. The nature of these complaints made to Mr. GAYLER, the special agent, are of all sorts and conditions imaginable. Sometimes a letter and contents disappears altogether, and no trace of it is ever found. In some instances, the letter, after great delay, reaches its destination, with the contents—drafts, notes, or samples—abstracted, but sealed neatly, as though not tampered with. All these matters are carefully examined into and usually result in convincing the writer that the fault was not with the City and Suburban Post-office. Under present arrangements mail peculations are next to impossible. The system of detection in the Secret Service Department is reduced to such a science that any tampering with mail matter cannot be continued for any length of time. In obscure offices dishonesty is most probable, but the largest detection may be the swifter and surer is conviction of the guilty party secured. A suspected employe in any capacity is at once placed under surveillance, the method of which is new and profoundly secret. Mr. GAYLER's detective agents are not known at the office, nor has any one, indeed, but the chief of the department, knowledge of their plan of operations. Most of the men employed on this station are veterans of the late war, and all are supposed to be above suspicion. They are placed under bonds for the faithful performance of duty, and of all the numerous cases investigated, very few have been found to swerve from the line of rectitude in the path of duty. A large proportion of the complaints against carriers have proceeded from persons of limited understanding of the mail system, and generally found to be based solely upon imagination. Between 200 and 400 unstamped, mis-directed or blank, or unsealed letters and packages daily accumulate, and at even a cursory glance show how to a THREE Report were several large envelopes from banks or banking firms, containing checks, notes or drafts, representing a large amount in the aggregate—one being a draft for $14,000—and all were unsealed. Others were unstamped, and others, not addressed, thirty two had no State or town direction; two had counterfeit stamps; several had "washed" (once used) stamps; a number of papers and packages, containing samples of tea, the latter weighing about four ounces, were sealed closely, and had an insufficient amount of postage stamps; several had no address superscribed. Such instances are, ordinarily, of every-day occurrence, and are at once discovered. Even if any of these might pass the inspection of one clerk, there would be other lynx-like eyes to catch the defect. A large proportion of business men intrust the delivery and reception of their mail packages to young, inefficient, lazy, careless and ignorant boys. In many cases, large firms allow their younger clerks to address their envelopes and affix the postage stamps. As might be expected they often neglect to seal, stamp and properly direct them. To save themselves trouble—especially at evening—they will thrust their letters in the nearest lamp-post box and pile the newspapers outside, which usually will cause several hours' delay in their transmission. Messrs. A. T. STEWART & Co. have an immense correspondence, frequently over-averaging 5,000 letters. They have never entered a complaint about a loss, delay or misdeliverance. They employ an intelligent mature man as their mail clerk. He attends to this duty exclusively. Every letter is carefully examined, to see that the superscription is legibly and properly made, the necessary stamps affixed and the envelope closely sealed. He deposits these in the Post-office, and receives all mail matter addressed to the firm. No other person is ever allowed to do that work. With such a simple and reasonable precaution a vast amount of trouble, annoyance, delay and loss would be prevented.

Statistics of Albany Penitentiary.

From the Albany Express, Dec. 14.

Gen. PILSBURY estimates the Penitentiary, and the land attached to it, to be worth $250,000. Its original cost was about $60,000. All the additions made to it during the past twenty-two years, were paid for out of the earnings of the institution. The following facts and figures, compiled from the appendix to the annual reports of the Inspectors and Superintendent, will be read with interest:

The total value of property on hand, consisting of furniture, provisions, clothing, bedding, &c., Oct. 31, 1870, was $19,942 38. The total amount of cash on hand Oct. 31, 1870, was $67,120 49. The total number of convicts received at the Penitentiary since its opening, up to Oct. 31, 1870, was 20,614—males, 18,262; females, 2,352. Of this number 11,420 were intemperate, and, up to temperate; 11,194 were single, and 9,320 married; 11,750 were foreigners, and 8,684 natives.

The total income of the institution up to Oct. 31, 1870, was $680,455 12; ordinary expenditures, $631,041 18; income over expenditures, $172,513 29. In the years 1840-69-68, the expenditures exceeded the income $14,199 38, yet notwithstanding this fact, the aggregate income amounted to the sum above stated.

American Whales in the North Pacific.

From the Honolulu Gazette, Nov. 9.

Our annual visitors are coming into port quite fast, and we are glad to say, with good catches. The highest, so far, is the Josephine, Capt. COGAN, with 2,200 barrels. Such a report reminds us of the old times of 1852, and the following six or seven years, when from two to three thousand barrels was frequently reported as the season's catch of a ship. Speaking of whalers, their indomitable energy is something remarkable. Governments have sent out exploring and surveying ships, and expeditions, to discover the North Pole, expending large sums of money for the object. But the hardy whaleman, in pursuit of an honest livelihood, are the best explorers. During the past season, some of the ships cruising in the Arctic got so near the supposed situation of the Pole that their longitude was scarcely worth working up. We predict that a whaler will be the first to discover and go through the long-sought north-west passage, the search for which has cost the world so much money and so many valuable lives.

The American Press Association.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

The late General Agent of the American Press Association has sent me a communication containing, among other statements, the following, viz.:

"The dispatches at present furnished by what is called the American Press Association, and purporting to be signed by my (London) partner, * * * containing news copied from English papers, and from twelve to twenty-four hours behind the advice of the Associated Press, are forgeries."

J. W. SIMONTON.

The Philharmonic Concerts.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In your issue of today there appears a letter under the head of "The Philharmonic Society and its High Prices of Admission," penned by a melancholy individual who signs himself "Crotchet." (Crotchety would be more appropriate, perhaps,) in which it is asserted that the cost of attending the Philharmonic concerts is fearfully exorbitant. Our friend, having fully made up his mind upon the subject, neglects to give the unsophisticated public his data, so that it might form its own opinion as to what is extravagant or not. This omission I will endeavor to supply. The cost of reserved seat and tickets for all the eighteen rehearsals and six concerts is $13, which makes each entertainment cost about fifty-four cents. We are to understand, then, that the net expense of attending "quite as good concerts" in "London, Brussels or Berlin" is but 54½ cents, for your correspondent tells us that in these places the cost is but one-tenth of what it is here. Even when he heard Madam CLARA SCHUMANN play at the Crystal Palace, London, at a charge of two shillings, it cost considerably more than these entertainments do. The "Beethoven Festival" of which he speaks, although given by the Philharmonic Society, has nothing to do with its regular season of concerts, and, consequently, he should not lead the public to imply that the charges are similar.

If lager-beer, &c., were introduced at Philharmonic the admission fee might, perhaps, be reduced to "a few cents," as "Crotchet" remarks it is in some parts of Germany.

Finally, Mr. Editor, I would remark that there is a law that regulates almost all the professions and trades, namely, that of supply and demand; and we may rest assured that if musical talent were to be very much better rewarded here than in Europe we would soon have in our midst all the eminent musicians who at present are the pride of the Old World.

NEW MISSION CHAPEL.

Opening Services in the New Chapel of the Bethlehem Mission—Interesting Addresses by Bishop Foster and Dr. Ogilby.

On one of the most bleakly-barren spots in Manhattan Island, situated in Ninth-avenue, between Eighty-second and Eighty-third streets, the centre of a region were Nature reigns in almost her primitive ruggedness, a building has lately been erected, which, more than any other, indicates the advancing, civilizing tread of this mighty City. Here a German Mission Church, called Bethlehem Chapel, has been established, in which the opening services were held yesterday morning. The Mission Society of the Protestant Episcopal Church in this City has recognized the necessity for Christian labor in this district, where the people are principally poor ignorant Germans, engaged in the roughest kind of toil in the City during the day, and living with their families in the small wooden shanties, which are irregularly scattered over this entire region. A temporary wooden building was erected in the Autumn of 1869, but this proving inadequate, the Ladies' Industrial Society connected with the Mission, under the superintendence of Mrs. TERHUNE, by their zeal and energy, collected over $5,000, and constructed the present plain, but tasteful, commodious, Gothic edifice, at a cost of $8,000. The building is 36 feet by 60 feet, and consists of one main hall, with a basement, in which the school-rooms are situated. The labors of the kind ladies interested in the Mission have been largely devoted to the poor children of the district, and the eight or eighty schools, the Industrial School and the Sabbath-School have been instruments in their hands of accomplishing much good. There is still a debt of $2,000 owing to the Protestant Episcopal City Mission, but the ladies are sanguine that this will soon be paid. Mr. TUDORS, the architect, supplied the plans, and superintended the construction without any cost. Rev. F. OBERLE is in charge of this Mission, and will, on each Sabbath, celebrate the service of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the German language. He is assisted in the school by Mr. and Mrs. TOMLINSON. Owing to the sudden change in the temperature, and the out-of-the-way character of the place, the congregation which assembled in the chapel yesterday morning was not very large. The following clergymen occupied seats around the altar: Right Rev. H. POTTER, D. D., Bishop of New-York; Rev. FRED. OGILBY, D. D., Trinity Church; Rev. Dr. GRUBE, Rev. Dr. GREN and Rev. F. OBERLE. Nearly 200 German children of the district were present, and illustrated by their quiet, orderly demeanor that the labors of the ladies have not so far been in vain. After the morning service had been concluded, and a very sweet hymn by the boy choir of Trinity, Rev. Dr. OGILBY delivered the opening sermon, or rather address, for he did not select any text. He chose the appropriate theme "The Bethlehem Mission." After eulogizing the Christian efforts of the kind ladies engaged in the good work of administering to the wants of the poor, there were some very lessons which the occasion should impress upon their minds. First, to increase and confirm their faith; and second, to quicken and extend their charity. After dwelling on these points for some time, he related the history of the Bethlehem Mission from the conception to the present time, and which, he said, should stand as a monument to that "faith which works by love." He closed by extolling charity, the greatest of all the virtues. At this season of gifts there could be no more appropriate object than gifts to Bethlehem Mission. The speaker hoped that the money would be spent on the sick and needy." As they leave this sanctuary may this blessing be carried with them, into all their walks of life, that when this day of God's mercy shall issue in the day of His judgment they may enter into life eternal, greeted with the words of the Judge of quick and dead, "Inasmuch as you did it unto the least of these my servants, you did it unto me."

At the conclusion of Dr. OGILBY's discourse, the venerable Bishop of New-York made a short but very interesting address. So many pleasing reflections, he said, had passed through his mind during the service that he scarcely knew where to begin. He was reminded of the character of two men in whose hearts charity was the predominating trait. One of them was a Christian saint, who lived over 100 years ago, and whose whole life was an index of his benevolence and charity; and yet this good man on approaching the river of death, expressed regret that he had not more fully devoted himself to alleviate the unhappiness of the poor and needy. The other, the Bishop continued, was a friend of his own, a man of large heart, munificent and yet unostentatious in his charity, whose hand was ever open to deserving suffering, and whose life was a living and the parable of the rich man and Lazarus, sadly reflected on his neglect of the poor, saying "What do any of us give but the crumbs!" Referring to the Bethlehem Mission, he said he was grateful to God for its creation, and to the good ladies who have labored so zealously in procuring the funds necessary to its completion. There is no spot more appropriate for such a mission, and he would rejoice to see thirty or forty more scattered over the island. The fact that "the poor have the Gospel preached unto them" is the best evidence of the divinity of Christ's Gospel, and the sincerity of the Christian sentiments of the community. At the close of the Bishop's address a liberal collection was taken up in aid of the Mission. The communion service was then solemnly celebrated, Bishop POTTER and Rev. Mr. TERRY officiating.

Subsequently, the greater portion of the audience were treated to a substantial lunch in the school-room, and the bleakness of the surrounding district, and the loud whistling of the cold December wind, were forgotten in the presence of Mrs. TERHUNE and her kind assistants, who spared no effort to administer to the comfort of their guests.

Condition of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the M. E. Church, New-York Branch, held a quarterly meeting yesterday, in the Mission Rooms, No. 805 Broadway. Interesting reports were received and read from auxiliary societies in Rochester, Syracuse, Auburn, Lima, Penn Yan, Cold Spring, Binghamton, N. Y., and Trenton, New-Brunswick, Newark, and other cities and places. The annual and life membership of the Society is very largely increasing, and the collections of Subscriptions in support of Bible readers and missionaries in India and China, and to the Heathen Woman's Friend, a monthly periodical published by the Society, has also greatly increased. This progress is mainly due to the adoption of mission "mite-boxes," which have been furnished to all proper applicants, and in which children, as well as adults, can drop their mites. The reported receipts reached several hundred dollars. It is the purpose of the Society to disseminate its mite-boxes throughout the country, but it is no longer necessary, as at first indicated, to send them to the Treasurer every quarter. If they are opened by the members and the amount sent in convenient bankable money, it will be much more convenient to the Treasurer. A board of thirty-seven managers selected from several auxiliary societies was elected, together with a few life members. Letters were read from Dr. MACLAY of the Foo-Chow Mission, thanking the Society for a donation of $600 in gold, and transmitting the action of the Mission Conference thereon. Also from Mrs. FOX, giving an account of a trip through the Isthmus of Suez and of the prospect for mission work in the Orient. Next Saturday a meeting of young ladies to organize an auxiliary will be held in St. Paul's Chapel, Fourth-avenue and Twenty-second-street.

Improvements at Quarantine.

A number of very useful and valuable improvements are at present going on at Upper and Lower Quarantine, under the direction of Dr. CARNOCHAN, the Health Officer of the port. The various buildings at Upper Quarantine have been put in an efficient state for the winter, and many of them have been enlarged considerably. A portion of the long pier has been fenced in, and the pier itself made more solid and durable. The small boats, for boarding, have been discontinued for the rough weather, and the small steam-yacht Fenlon will be kept in constant service for the boarding doctors, while the large side-wheel steamer Andrew Fletcher will do the heavy transporting business between the City and the Upper and Lower Bay.

The hospitals at Island No. 1 at Red Bank, in charge of Capt. O'ROURKE, Superintendent, which have been kept in excellent order during the Summer, are now free of patients, and are undergoing further improvements. The large apartments for patients are being further ventilated and made more comfortable. Already they are splendidly lighted, and now a new heating apparatus is being put in. A nice and safe landing-place has been built, which is most convenient for all visiting the island. The boats kept there have been scraped and generally overhauled, and the famous "Black Ball" line sloop has been much improved. This boat is used principally for conveying the dead bodies of yellow-fever patients to Seguine's Point for interment, and very often receives a warm reception from the people of that neighborhood, who sometimes threaten the crew with personal violence. This little vessel has a black ball painted on her sail, and hence the name of the "Black Ball" sloop.

The new island, about three-quarters of a mile from No. 1, is completed as far as the ground is concerned; but as yet no appropriation has been made for the erection of buildings. These latter, when put up, are intended for healthy passengers taken from infected vessels. The arrangements at the hospital are perfect.

LABORS OF MISSIONARIES.

Missionary Meeting at Aquebogue—The Work of Evangelization Among Unenlightened People.

On Tuesday and Wednesday a missionary meeting, under the auspices of the American Board of Foreign Missions, was held at the Congregational Church, Upper Aquebogue.

The meeting was opened on Tuesday evening by Rev. Dr. G. W. WOOD, the Secretary, who, in his address, spoke of the great work of the Board and the good now being accomplished.

Rev. Titus COAN, a well-known veteran missionary at the Sandwich Islands, gave a graphic account of his experience and of the volcanic eruptions which occurred in the islands a few years ago. He also spoke of the fire chasmes formed by the rivers of boiling lava that came rushing to the sea. At 4 P. M., April 2, 1868, in the midst of one of the most terrific earthquakes ever witnessed, everything swaying to and fro, the ground rising and swelling like a storm at sea, the rivers formed by the lava being from five to twenty feet wide, the bottom of crater of Kilauea sank hundreds of feet. At one place a hill was tumbled over a precipice, burying thirteen heathens together

ALLEGED NEWSPAPER LIBELS.

Complaints Against Sheriff O'Brien, Judge Ledwith, John Fox, and Other Leaders of the Young Democracy—Action Against a German Editor.

Yesterday afternoon CHARLES H. FARRELL, late chief editor of the Free Press, appeared at the Jefferson Market Police Court, before Justice SHANDLEY, and made application for a warrant for the arrest of Justice THOMAS A. LEDWITH, Sheriff JAMES O'BRIEN, Ex-Congressman JOHN FOX, JOSEPH BLUMENTHAL, and Justice EDWARD HOGAN, on a charge of libel. The affidavit upon which the warrant was sought to be obtained was drawn up in legal form and given to the Judge for perusal, after which it was transferred to the private pigeon-holes of the Police Court. Mr. FARRELL'S recent discharge from the Free Press, of which the defendants are stockholders, induced considerable comment in the columns of several local journals, and, writing on the subject, the Free Press, in Wednesday's issue, used the following, on which the libel was founded: "His (Mr. FARRELL'S) discharge was necessitated by reason of his habitual intemperance, laziness, and gross neglect of important duties, and his utter unreliability and favoritism in making the pay-roll of the Free Press a placeé for incompetent relatives." Mr. FARRELL denied the allegations contained, and Judge SHANDLEY issued a summons for the appearance of the defendants on Saturday next, on which occasion the charge will be investigated.

At the Essex Market Police Court, yesterday, before Judge LEDWITH, IVAN C. MICHAELS, editor and proprietor of the German newspaper, Lichtstrahl von New-York, appeared to answer a charge of libel preferred against him by JOHN H. BIELING, of No. 128 East Houston-street. It appeared in the affidavit of the complainant that he is President of a benevolent society known as Hiddies Bund, which meets at No. 101 First-avenue. On the 27th of November an article appeared in the Lichtstrahl in which the following question was demanded and answered, "Of whom do the officers of the Hiddies Bund consist? A.—Out of beer-suckers, assassins, runaways, scoundrels and scamps who have hitherto shown little humanity towards wives and children in despair and need, and such who have made fraudulent bankruptcies in Europe." This statement, the complainant alleges, was utterly false, and was made for a malicious motive.

The defendant was admitted to bail in $1,000, for examination on Saturday afternoon.

Proposed New Buildings.

The following is a list of new buildings proposed for erection in this City since the last report, and for the week ending Thursday, Dec. 15, 1870:

Unsafe Buildings.

Since the last report, and for the week ending Thursday, Dec. 15, 1870, the following buildings in this City have been reported as unsafe, in the particulars annexed, at the office of JAMES M. MAGGIGGON, Superintendent of the Department of Buildings. The weekly lists in his Department are longer now than usual, owing to the fact that the general survey of the City is now in progress, and therefore defects existing in buildings are more readily discovered:

Union-square, No. 32, unsafe wall, partition and iron columns; FRANK BAKER, owner.

West Twenty-fourth-street, No. 152, unsafe and broken brown-stone lintel course; FRANCIS DWIGHT, owner.

Leonard-street, No. 106, unsafe front wall and coping-stone; SELLY BROWN, owner.

Leonard-street, No. 108, unsafe and falling chimneys; HENRY HEATH, agent.

South-street, No. 162, unsafe chimneys and coping; SCHIEFFELIN & FORT, agents.

Seventh-street, south side, seventy-five feet north of north-east corner of West Sixteenth-street, chimneys dangerously insecure and unsafe, as are also the walls generally; F. de S. CHANLER, owner.

West Twenty-ninth-street, No. 6, old, in a dilapidated and unsafe condition generally; Mrs. MARY DUNCAN, owner.

Pitt-street, No. 75, unsafe and broken chimneys; JACOB LAMOUR, owner.

East Houston-street, No. 62, unsafe and broken chimneys; A. M. FARRIS, Jr., agent.

Mott, 108 and 110, unsafe, bulged and cracked front wall; JOHN A. STEWART, owner.

No. 111 South-street, unsafe, bulged and cracked front wall; JAMES M. ADAMS, owner.

No. 311 Pearl-street, unsafe and bulged front wall and broken leader; Schermerhorn Estate, owner.

No. 129 Beekman-street, unsafe and badly bulged front wall; Schermerhorn Estate, owner.

Nos. 16 and 18 Cliff-street, unsafe and badly cracked rear wall; WAGNER & PENNY, lessees.

No. 266 Broadway, unsafe party wall between Nos. 266 and 268, being of insufficient thickness to support the beams resting thereon; BENJAMIN WARNSHUT, owner.

Avenue D, north-east corner Tenth-street, dangerously unsafe wall gable-wall, by fire; D. S. MCALPIN & Co., owners.

No. 11 South-street, unsafe fourth story floor-beams; P. L. REVERE, owner.

No. 61 Vesey-street, unsafe, cracked and bulged rear wall; WM. T. COLT, owner.

Nos. 560 and 561 Eleventh-avenue, unsafe, cracked and sprung foundation walls; owner unknown.

No. 544 Pearl-street, unsafe chimneys; CHAS. H. TAYLOR, owner.

Greenwich-street, rear, No. 208, unsafe window, arched lintels; JOHN J. GILMORE, owner.

The following buildings have broken chimneys which are unsafe and liable to fall at any time:

Hudson-street, Nos. 440, 450, 452 and 454; W. A. CORY, owner.

Hudson-street, No. 482; WM. BURDETT, owner.

Hudson-street, No. 512; JOHN GERRANS, owner.

Hudson-street, No. 540; MR. KIRBY, owner.

Hudson-street, No. 542; WM. SIMPSON, owner.

Hudson-street, No. 618; T. C. WILEY, owner.

Thompson-street, No. 197; W. FUNKS, owner.

Washington-street, No. 71; W. & E. A. CRUSE, agents.

Alterations in Buildings.

For the week ending Thursday, Dec. 15, 1870, the following are the most important plans for alterations in buildings submitted at the Department in this City:

One brick store and tenement north-east corner of Third-avenue and Eighty-third-street, four stories, 25 by 52; building to be extended in rear 32 feet; H. ZIECKE, owner.

One brick second-class dwelling east side of Greenwich-street, 200 feet south of Canal-street, three stories 19 by 35, to be extended in rear 40 feet; PICAIET SIMONS CAPEL, owner.

One brick store and tenement No. 248 West Thirty-second-street, four stories, 23 by 55, to be extended in rear 20 feet; PHILIP GUNKEL, owner.

One frame second-class dwelling west side of Second-avenue, 25 feet south of One Hundred and Fourth-street, two stories, 24 by 35, to be extended in front 40 feet; WM. H. GAGE, owner.

One brick store and tenement No. 619 Sixth-avenue, 24.8 by 62.6, to be extended in rear 17 feet; New-York Dyeing and Printing Establishment, owners.

Department of Docks.

The Department of Docks met yesterday, Commissioner AGNEW presiding. Commissioners WOOD, SMITH and HENNY were also in attendance. The report of the Auditing Committee showed that the amount in the hands of the Treasurer on the 31st October was $194,869 62; paid for materials, labor, supplies and salaries during November, $88,185 75; paid to City Chamberlain for rent of piers and bulkheads, $182,000 75; total, $270,000 51—leaving a balance in favor of the Department of $72,869 51. On the motion of Mr. WOOD, it was resolved to change the day of meeting of the Auditing Committee from the first Monday of each month to the third. It was also resolved that a manual of the Department, with a map of the docks and piers, be prepared for circulation. Messrs. JOHNSON and PARKINSON, two experienced pilots, waited on the Board for the purpose of affording some information in reference to the erection of piers, and also with regard to the currents of the harbor. The interview was of a private character, and the meeting adjourned.

DECISIONS.

SUPREME COURT—CHAMBERS—DEC. 15.

By Judge Brady.

James Fisk, Jr., vs. The Albany and Susquehanna Railroad Company; motion to change the place of trial granted. The change will be to the County of Albany, unless the plaintiff prefers that it should be to Schoharie County, in which County the trial may be had at Troy. This privilege is granted to him, not because there is reason to apprehend that he may not be fairly dealt with in Albany, but to remove any possible doubt that there may be a foundation for his convictions on that subject. Ordered accordingly.

Bloomfield vs. Newton; motion granted.

United States Steam Sugar Refining Company; order settled.

By Judge Carrington.

Matthews vs. Coe; motion granted, and Sheriff's bill approved.

Shimeall vs. Shimeall; the defendant may answer in ten days.

Drexel vs. Ramous; order granted.

UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT.

No. 81.—Isaac J. Hosball vs. Edward Taylor, et al.—Appeal from the District Court for West Virginia.—This cause was also heard, the question being as to the interest of Hosball in an undivided sixth part of premises in Wood County, of that State, covered by an oil and mineral lease, and he claiming as a tenant in dominion. The Court of Appeals Hill was dismissed and the appellant that the dismissal was error.

George H. Lee for appellant; J. R. Tucker for appellee.

No. 80.—Lewis Tappan vs. John and Horace Beardsley.—Error to the Circuit Court for the Southern District of New-York.—The defendants in error constituted the firm of H. Beardsley & Co., merchants at Norwalk, Huron County, Ohio. The plaintiff in error carried on, in New-York, the business of a mercantile agency, and in the course of his business published, concerning the firm, that their store would probably be closed, and that the wife of one of the brothers had applied for divorce and alimony, and he had in consequence, put his property out of his hands. It was also said the firm had been sued. And subsequently the statements were contained, and it was added that there was no doubt of the firm being able to do a prosperous business as long as they were honest, which would be so long as suited their interest. The firm sued to recover damages for the libel, and the defendant pleaded that the statements published were confidential communications, made in good faith in the course of business, on proper occasion and upon proper motive, and in the ordinary course of evidence offered by Tappan to show the usefulness of mercantile agencies in the conduct of internal trade and commerce, on the ground that no evidence had been given of the part of the Beardsleys's pleading to impeach or to bring into doubt the general legality or usefulness of the business. The Court charged the jury that the agency conducted by Tappan was, in the general purpose and features, both lawful and useful, and that information, however defamatory, communicated by him in good faith, he believing it to be true, to merchants employing his agency, in relation to persons in their business, was in law a privileged communication for which no action could be maintained by the party defamed by it, except on proof of express malice. To this charge the plaintiff in error excepted upon the ground of doing business deprived him of any immunity under the rules of law concerning privileged communications. The employment by him of a clerk or agent to make the communication, and the employment of a clerk or agent by his merchant subscriber to obtain or receive it, were each alike charged to be incompatible with the secrecy or privilege enjoyed by those rules. The instruction on this head, in full, was as follows: It having been shown that a subscriber of Tappan had asked for the information given; that the merchant to whom such information was given, being lawfully entitled to ask for and to receive it, and the defendants, if acting in good faith, being lawfully authorized to give it, there was, in the sense of the law in such a case, no publication, and therefore no ground of action; and that if the defendants in the suit had only communicated by himself personally to such of his subscribers as personally made inquiries concerning the standing and credit of the plaintiffs, the reporter complained of, the case would have come within the rule of law as to privileged communications. But in this case the plaintiffs had given evidence by new that the words in question had been entered in defendant's record book by one Parmon other than defendant himself; that they were read by Mr. Douglass, defendant's chief clerk, and by several other of his clerks, and in the hearing of such clerks; and that they were also read by Mr. Douglass, and perhaps by another clerk of defendant, to clerks of subscribers, sent by their employers by mails inquiries at the agency and that all such readings to or by persons other than the defendant and the merchant actually and personally interested in obtaining information concerning the plaintiffs, were unlawful; that no person other than the merchant himself, asking for information, had in law a right to read or hear said words, and to him they could be lawfully communicated only by the defendant himself and that the reading of said words by any person in defendant's employ with his permission, or the reading of said words by defendant himself, or by any person in his employ, to the clerk of a merchant subscriber requesting information concerning the plaintiffs, was an unlawful publication, not in all within or privileged by the rule of law, as to private communications; and that for every such publication proved in this case, the defendant was responsible in damages to the plaintiffs, unless it was shown that the words themselves, and no attempt had been made on the trial to prove them to be true. Tappan's counsel excepted to this instruction save as to its first sentence and requested the Court to instruct the jury on the law of privileged communications, thus:

First—That the privilege applied to communications made in this case, notwithstanding that the words in question were read by or in the hearing of the clerks of the merchant subscribers, provided such clerks were necessary to the transaction of the business of their employers, and were confidentially employed therein. But the Court refused to charge or instruct the jury in the manner asked, and excepted was filed in the minutes. $10,000. The case was commenced in 1869, and tried in the District Court in 1871. In 1874 motion for new trial was made before Judge NELSON (the only of the Beardsleys's counsel exceptions taken in the District Court,) which was denied. The case then came here, where it was now argued. Counsel for the plaintiff in error, after stating the extended course in the trial, of the verbal communications, maintaining that the term duty, as used therein, is not confined to duties which are binding in law, and therefore of perfect obligation; yet, on the contrary, it includes those of imperfect obligation." No extreme or impracticable society has marked the application of the rule. Neither the executrix of a special pleader nor the counsel of a society is required to instruct the jury on communication. If fairly warranted by any reasonable occasion or exigency, and honestly made, such communications are protected, for the common convenience and welfare of society, and the law has not restricted the rights to make them within any narrow limits. The presence of a third person, not interested in or connected with the subject matter, has not been deemed objectionable, when it was not sought, or permitted wantonly, but from necessity, or even from motives of prudence or reasonable expediency. Where the nature of the case has required it, and important interests were involved, the Courts have allowed a much degree of publicity has been allowed in privileged communications. As to the degree of publicity that may be allowed, or of secrecy that should be observed in taking privileged communications, all the reported judicial determinations hold an uniform doctrine. Liberty of speech or publication is not permitted beyond the actual exigencies of society. But within that sphere it is recognized as a wholesome law, and in all lawful business.

As to the business in question, it is said that the procuring and communicating such information, though not done gratuitously, but for pay, has been approved as both lawful and useful by every tribunal before which it has been arraigned, and by every judicial mind which has had occasion to examine and consider it, including the learned Judge (the late Judge Betts) who presided at the trial of this cause, and the eminent and experienced Justice of this City (Judge Roosevelt) who heard the motion for a new trial. The common sentiment of the mercantile class has sustained the business, and in consequence it has grown up along with the rapid growth and wealth and interests of the country. Proper precautions and safeguards in its management are not less imperatively dictated by self-interest than by morality. The practical efficacy of these rules, as well tested and implemented, is indicated by the infrequency of complaints or law suits. That, at most, fourteen suits for defamation have occurred in so wide-spread a business, during the period of its existence, only this one, having attained to any success, is pregnant evidence that its action is innocuous. All the Judges and private persons who concurring opinions have spoken in the reported utility of this business, knew that by no possibility could it be conducted without the aid and cooperation of agents or employes; and the Judge who tried this cause was the first to disclose a fear that indiscriminate use of the means of its inevitable destruction. Perhaps the refusal of a new trial has added another and powerful voice in favor of this idea; but, if so, it is hoped that a fair and impartial review of the trial will prevent. The counsel for the defendants in error, maintain the position assumed by the Court below, in respect of all the points and questions involved, and insist that the communication of the words in this case, claimed to be a libel, from clerks to clerks, was not a privileged communication. It is submitted that the evidence will conclusively show that these words were such rumors as were denied by Tappan, and that it is asserted that any rumors which were afloat were put in circulation by the publication of the libel in New-York. A fair and honest inquiry by Tappan, in a city in the home and place of the Beardsleys, would have shown the falsity and groundlessness of the reports, and that the Beardsleys were men of good character, and merchants of good credit and standing. The evidence in the divorce case shows that the application by the wife of one of them, was without cause, and dismissed. Even the unfavorable rumors, partial and unjust of the law, and not from any fault in the conduct and character of the man. The repetition of the libel is relied on to show malice, and there was no error in the charge that damages might be assessed for such repetition. Many questions are raised and discussed, but those stated are the main points involved.

Williams, Allen Butler and Charles O'Conor, for plaintiff in error; T. W. Bartley and Ex-Chief-Justice Casey, of the Court of Claims, for defendants.

COMMON PLEAS—SPECIAL TERM—DEC. 15.

Before Judge Loew.

JUDGMENT OR FORFEITED RECOGNIZANCE.

In the matter of Philip Smith, surety for Louis M. Van Eten.—Louis M. Van Eten was some months ago placed on trial under an indictment for forgery, in having altered the amount of a check. On the trial, the jury failed to agree, and pending a second trial, the accused was admitted to bail in $10,000. This bond, as alleged, was forfeited by the non-appearance of the prisoner, and a judgment entered thereon. A motion is now made to open this judgment, on the ground that the bondsman, Smith, was taken by surprise, and had not been duly notified of the motion directed. The motion to vacate was also urged on the ground that the recognizance was not legal and binding because not entered on the minutes of the Court, as required by the statute; that the judgment was entered without notice to the surety, and without commencing a suit under the statute of 1844, which provides that the recognizance in this City must be sued in the county to answer a criminal charge, on being forfeited shall be filed by the District-Attorney, together with the order of the Court forfeiting the same in the office of the County Clerk, and docketed as if the parties were a transcript of a judgment; that a subsequent statute says that the District-Attorney must prosecute on such bonds by action of debt for the penalty thereof, in the name of the People against the obligors, shall be the same in all respects as in personal actions for the recovery of any debt; that the District-Attorney had no right to proceed under the act of 1844, that being clearly superseded by the subsequent provision of the Code defining the mode of bringing civil actions. That mode had not been followed in this case, and therefore the judgment is irregular and void.

In opposition, it was contended that the presumptions were in favor of the regularity of the judgment entered; that the prisoner was entitled to no consideration from the Court, and that the opening of this judgment would prejudice the rights of other sureties in similar bonds would be released from their obligations. Judge LOEW took the papers and reserved his decision.

George W. Blunt, Jr., for motion; Algernon S. Sullivan, opposing.

COMMON PLEAS—TRIAL TERM—PART I.—DEC. 15.

Before Judge Joseph F. Daly and a Jury.

A HEAVY COTTON SUIT DECIDED.

Gardner et al. vs. Rome et al.—This was an action to recover the value of 111 bales of cotton sold to the firm of Biddle & Co., and by them pledged to defendants for an advance of $40,000. Plaintiffs claimed that the cotton was sold for cash, and that before delivery was completed, Biddle & Co., being insolvent, pledged the cotton to the defendants for $40,000, $20,000 of which was applied to defendants' in liquidation of a previous existing debt. The facts have already appeared at length in the TIMES. The question submitted to the jury was, whether the delivery had been completed to Biddle & Co., when the cotton was pledged for payment, whether Biddle & Co. practiced fraud in obtaining the delivery, and whether defendants' advance was made in good faith.

The Court directed a verdict of plaintiffs for the full amount claimed, amounting to over $50,000, including interest, and the Court granted an extra allowance of $15.

Messrs. McFarlane and Larocque for plaintiffs; Messrs. Evarts and Choate for defendants.

MARINE COURT—PART II.

Before Judge Joachimsen and a Jury.

THE ALLEGED SLANDER OF A BAPTIST MINISTER—VERDICT FOR THE DEFENDANT.

The case of Peter F. Jones vs. Jay S. Backus was concluded yesterday by the rendition of a verdict for the defendant. The plaintiff, who was for some years a Baptist minister in Vermont, but who recently espoused the Presbyterian faith, claimed that he had been damaged in his good name and reputation in consequence of the following alleged defamatory language, uttered by the defendant: "He is a deposed minister of our denomination; he has lost his ecclesiastical standing in our (Baptist) denomination; he has been tried in Vermont and found guilty by such men as Dr. Mason, of Greenwich, Vt.; Dr. Goodby, Dr. Thompson and others, all of whom were among the most respectable ministers of the Baptist Church in that State."

The trial of the case occupied two days, and the jury, after a long deliberation, rendered a verdict for the defendant as above stated.

For the plaintiff, Mr. Dennis McMahon; for the defendant, Mr. A. E. Capwell.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

EUROPE.

A sortie of greater magnitude than any previous one is rumored in Bordeaux to have just been made from Paris, with unexpected success. The Prussians moving on Havre were hurriedly retiring at the latest date. The excitement in Bordeaux was intense, but nothing official relating to Paris was made public. Among the rumors is one that an Aid-de-Camp of Gen. TROCHU had reached Bordeaux. Another dispatch says the Germans recently menacing Tours were retreating toward Paris....The Germans on the left bank of the Loire had occupied Coutras, Montrichard and Ramorantin. They were also said to have bombarded Blois and to have occupied a suburb of Tours.....M. GAMBETTA was at Blois when the Germans summoned it to surrender, but he ordered a defense and blew up the bridge. This decision was made necessary as a protection to Gen. CHAUZY'S army, moving toward the west, where heavy reinforcements would be received. The occupation of Blois by the Germans is said to be confirmed in a London telegram. Dispatches from Havre report that city and Honfleur quiet. Thirty thousand men have been sent forward to confront the Germans. Montmédy has surrendered to the Germans, a breach having been battered in the walls by the besiegers.

The American steamer Erie, from New-York, according to a London telegram, is off Cowes, with a cargo of arms for the French, awaiting a French man-of-war to convoy her to a French port. The new German loan is at a premium in London. Official statements are put forth at Bordeaux that the French Government did not refuse to enter the Eastern Conference. Neutrals, understanding that a French representative is necessary, they are endeavoring to effect an armistice for the election of a Constituent Assembly, the only authority which Prussia will recognize.

The statement was made officially in Hungarian Delegation, at Pesth, on the 15th, that the Austro-Hungarian Army consists of 864,000 regulars and 187,527 Landwehr. Business in England is depressed by anxiety over the Luxembourg difficulty. HOYLE'S cotton mills at Bolton, England, have been burned.

CONGRESS.

In the Senate yesterday several new bills were introduced and some old ones disposed of. The proposition to establish a Department of Indian Affairs was indefinitely postponed, as was that to constitute Jersey City a port of entry. Among the bills reported but not disposed of was that introduced by Mr. CHANDLER, authorizing the President to suspend the privilege of bonded transportation and the right of navigating American waters hitherto conceded to Canada. The rest of the day was taken up by a speech of Mr. SCHURZ, of Missouri. His resolution in favor of the removal of political disabilities, in which he gave an account of the recent canvass in Missouri, and defended the action of himself and his associates in dividing the Republican Party there. He declared himself still an adherent of that party and a supporter of the Administration, and expressed the hope that the Republicans would yet form the party of the future. Mr. DRAKE rose to reply, but gave way to allow for adjournment, and will make his speech today.

In the House, the debate on Mr. BUTLER'S Amnesty bill was continued. The speeches were mostly in opposition to the bill, and the leading speakers were Messrs. FARNSWORTH of Illinois, LAWRENCE of Ohio, COX of New-York, and SARGENT of California. Mr. MAYNARD, of Tennessee, and some others, opposed the removal of disabilities at present. The debate was interrupted only by the hour of adjournment, and the bill then went over till Tuesday.

GENERAL.

The business manager of the Sacramento Daily Reporter, Mr. CHARLES E. FISHER, was shot dead in his own house on Wednesday evening by CHARLES DELL, a suitor of his daughter, whom he had ordered to leave the house.

The Indian Council at Ocmulgee, Indian Territory, was effected on the 11th inst. The chief subject of debate was a scheme to organize a territorial government embracing all the tribes. The plan is in conformity with all the laws of Congress since 1866, and contemplates the protection of the weak tribes against the strong, and is only to be established with the consent of all.

The Virginia Republican State Central Committee adopted a resolution, on Wednesday, praying Congress to pass a general amnesty bill.

In the Virginia Senate, yesterday, the subject of the State debt was debated, the general sentiment being in favor of bringing the question of West Virginia's share before the Supreme Court of the United States, and, if payment is not compelled there, of settling the whole debt herself. All the speakers opposed any idea of repudiation.

The death of Rev. CHARLES SAMUEL STEWART, senior Chaplain of the United States Navy, occurred yesterday at Cooperstown, N. Y.

One of the revenue officials at Crockett, Texas, communicates to the Bureau of Statistics the information that the price of improved land in that section has advanced to from $5 to $15 per acre, and that unimproved lands range from $1 to $5; and the rental of improved land is from $3 to $5. He also gives valuable information regarding labor and wages, and the products of the soil.

The North Carolina House of Representatives sent a committee of three, yesterday, to inform the Senate that articles of impeachment against Gov. HOLDEN would be submitted, to which the Senate replied that order would be taken in the matter.

The three colored men, DAVID FISHER, JOHN C. OLIVER, and CELESTINE OLIVER, accused of killing Judge LAWRE and Major SCHOMBERG, at Donaldsville, La., during the election riots, were yesterday released under a writ of habeas corpus, but were rearrested at the instance of the State.

In the case of BENHAM'S assignee against the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Company of New-Jersey, in the United States District Court at Pittsburg, the jury found for the plaintiff the amount of the policy and interest. BENHAM is alleged to have committed suicide two years ago.

The gas-works at Warsaw, N. Y., were destroyed by fire at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Dr. GATES, the proprietor, Mrs. GATES and two workmen, were badly burned.

Five convicts attempted to escape from the prison at Sing Sing yesterday, but were unsuccessful.

A Washington telegram says it is positively said at the Executive Mansion there is no truth whatever in the rumors of Secretary BOUTWELL'S resignation, and it is also asserted that his relations with the President are, as heretofore, of a friendly character.

The Welland Canal closed yesterday for the season.

Judge BRADY, of the Supreme Court, yesterday rendered a decision in the case of J. FISK, Jr., vs. The Albany and Susquehanna Railroad Company, on a motion to changed the place of trial from this City to Albany. The Judge says, "The change will be to Albany unless the plaintiff prefers Rensselaer County, in which case the trial may be had at Troy. This privilege is granted to the plaintiff, not because there is reason to apprehend he may not be fairly dealt with at Albany, but to remove any possible doubt that there may be foundation for his convictions on that subject."

A correspondence between Mr. FECHTER and Mr. CHANFRAU and Mr. JAMES W. WALLACK, published in explanation of Mr. FECHTER'S retirement from the management of the Globe Theatre, Boston, which event will take place in about a month, is printed in our telegraphic news columns.

James Fisk's Lawyers.

We have spoken once or twice already of the plea put forward occasionally—though we admit, falteringly and blushingly, by the counsel of FISK, Jr., in defense of their acceptance from him of a general retainer, in aid of his rascalities—that it was the duty of an advocate to accept all cases offered him. Unfortunately for this doctrine, no honest lawyer has ever held it, or acted on it; and we believe we may affirm with safety that it has been adopted by a Sunday-school teacher and church member, for the first time in this City. There is no lawyer, honest or dishonest, who does not discriminate, in his daily practice, in the choice of his business. There are certain classes of business which every lawyer, whose practice is large, deliberately and systematically refuses. Mr. DAVID DUDLEY FIELD never appears in the Criminal Courts; other lawyers never appear in the Courts at all; and lawyers who have reached the topmost pinnacles of their profession, like CHARLES O'CONOR, and who do not care to work as hard as in the earlier stages of their career, lay down certain rigid rules for the limitation of their practice. Now what lawyers do every day for their taste, or for their ease, or for their health, or by way of adapting their work to their peculiar powers, it is a little cool to ask us to believe they need not do for the preservation of their own morals, and those of the community in which they live. If they reject certain business because they want more leisure, or because they think a particular kind of cases best suited to their faculties, or because they find that their connections render the cultivation of certain fields easier to them than others—it is certainly not asking too much of any counselor to ask him to refuse all cases coming to him from notorious knaves, and the direct and palpable object of which is to protect them in the enjoyment of the results of their knavery. It is fair to ask, too, what interests would suffer if Messrs. FIELD & SHEARMAN had refused FISK'S briefs? Not those of justice, certainly. They will hardly pretend that the effect of their example might have prevented an honest man from finding a lawyer to defend his interests. The most they could claim, as likely to result from it, supposing the Bar to take them as models, would be that one man apparently, but not really, a rogue, might find difficulty in employing an advocate. But then even this contingency would be too remote to be worth consideration, because the peculiarity of their connection with FISK is that it was not formed when he was an obscure scoundrel, whose character and conduct it was still permissible to be mistaken about. It was formed when his villainies were better proved and far more notorious than those of most of the inmates of the penitentiary, and has been continued in the face of the church and the world for years after they had become a national scandal, and a danger to the national credit. His position, it must be remembered, is not that of a criminal who is pursued by justice, and who, therefore, calls on a lawyer to see that on his trial the machinery of justice works fairly. It is that of a man actively engaged in cheating, and who calls on his lawyer to stand sentinel while he is packing up his plunder, and cajole the policeman into looking the other way, or letting him carry it off in peace.

We have, however, one more point to make against "these abominable principles and this more abominable avowal of them," and we make it the last, because it is the strongest of all, and we challenge the members of HENRY WARD BEECHER'S church to stand round, their hands on the Gospels, while we put it. It is this: Granting that the broadest statement ever made as to the duty of counsel in the matter of taking retainers from all comers, be correct, the worst man, in the worst times, who has ever claimed complete license for counsel in this matter has done so on the assumption that the Judges were pure, and that no matter what case an unscrupulous lawyer brought into Court, he would not be able to secure from the Bench anything but what the law allowed. We dare the most evil-minded explorer of the records of forensic rapacity to deny this. The most immoral theory ever set up with regard to the duties of counsel has been saved from the worst taint by the hypothesis on which it has always rested, that justice reigned in the Courts.

Now the shame and scandal of the connection of Messrs. FIELD & SHEARMAN with FISK, Jr., and the resulting shame and scandal of Mr. SHEARMAN'S connection with HENRY WARD BEECHER'S church, is that not only do they take a general retainer from a professional swindler, but they go with him before Judges whom they know he has corrupted, and who they know gives them, not whatever the law allows them, but whatever they choose to ask for; and give it without more concealment or hesitation than a butcher would show in selling them a leg of mutton. If it had been possible, therefore, for them to find shelter under the base and bad plea of a counsel's irresponsibility for the character of his cases, this corruption of the Judges before whom they practise, which both of them in better days have exposed, would have driven them into "the pelting of that pitiless storm" of public indignation which we are glad to believe is rapidly rising against them, and which will convert FISK'S money into dross in their pockets. For there is no man who believes that the Church of Christ should be a house of prayer; no man who believes that judicial purity is the anchor of public morality; no man who believes that in the honesty of the ancient and honorable profession to which they belong lies one of the best encouragements to public spirit; no man who believes that the morality of the next generation will largely depend not so much on what it learns in schools, as on the examples set it by the conspicuous men of our time, —but must look on these lawyers both as great and grievous offenders against the society in which they live.

A Plea for the Children.

Perhaps there were very few persons in this City last night who would have been willing to expose themselves to the weather more than they could help. The winds swept wildly down our streets, shaking windows and doors, and enveloping in whirlwinds of dust those who were obliged to face the rough and stormy night. The majority of our readers were, doubtless, snug enough in warm and comfortably-furnished rooms; and as their curtains were drawn, and the cold shut out, they probably felt little temptation to encounter once more the heavy squalls which shook the stoutest dwelling. At such times as these it is natural to think of the many thousands of our kind who are compelled to face the utmost violence of the elements. We need not let our imagination rove for examples to the armed hosts which cover the plains of France. Too many cases are, unhappily, to be found at our own doors. How many mothers, as they saw their children covered up with warm clothing in luxurious beds, cast a thought upon those other children who were, perhaps, crouching together on the hall steps below, striving in vain to escape the pitiless blast? Happiness is often selfish, and the houseless wanderers of the streets receive little sympathy from the multitude. But there are some, let us be thankful for it, who are willing to devote their lives to the task of lightening the burden of human misery; and never does their benevolence take a higher form than when it is devoted to the rescue of those who, while yet on the threshold of life, have been made to drink deeply of its bitterest cup.

Our readers must be familiar, by name at least, with the Children's Aid Society. It has accomplished a great work—but the work is a never-ending one. "The poor ye have always with you;" the saying of the Divine Master is as true today as it was eighteen centuries ago. The Children's Aid Society does all that it can, but we may see for ourselves, any day or night, how many there are whom its benificent hand has not yet reached. During the past year alone it has taken into its lodging-houses upward of 12,000 girls and boys, and it has sent 2,757 to good homes, chiefly in the West. By that much it has reduced the sum total of wretchedness, perhaps of crime. Fifty dollars will enable it to provide "three homeless children with clothing, and send them to the Far West, where they will grow up to be honest men and women in a farmer's family." If anybody who can possibly spare fifty dollars can read that statement, and not send the money at once to the Secretary, Mr. C. L. BRACE, No. 19 East Fourth-street, New-York City, or to Mr. W. A. BOOTH, No. 100 Wall-street, he must have a harder heart than most people would like to possess.

It is not the fault of these poor homeless children that they are beginning life with all its darkest misfortunes encompassing them. When people are asked to relieve adults, they are apt to say, "they have brought themselves to their present situation by idleness, drunkenness, or vice." The bare-footed and hungry little outcasts who make their mute appeal to us have none of these sins to answer for. They have done nothing to bring down upon their heads the sorrows which oppress their unhappy lives. They are helpless in the presence of misfortunes which often crush the energies of those most experienced in the ways of the world. Many a father has never imagined that his children would come to want—and yet it may be that these very children are shivering with cold and hunger in these bleak December streets. We have seen them cowering at night in empty carts for shelter, hiding their emaciated forms in doorways, or sleeping on the straw which has been swept out from some warehouse. Who that is obliged to be out much at night has not witnessed these heart-breaking scenes? Life is not too happy for any of us. Do all that we can, and very much occurs which baffles or disappoints. But when the earliest recollections of childhood are doomed to be those of cruel sufferings, of the darkest privations and miseries, death itself may well seem less terrible. Mr. BOOTH, or Mr. BRACE, or any of the officers of the Children's Aid Society, could tell us of cases which would stir compassion in a heart of stone. They do all that they can; if they are not allowed to do more, it is because the public will not help them enough. Surely this is a cause which it needs no great pleading to recommend. We know of this Society and its work; we can attest that it is a Society which devotes to the very best uses every dollar intrusted to it. There is no fear that your money will be misapplied if you bestow it there. Let the reader determine to help it. Let him send it some money today—let every one give something, even if it is but half a dollar, according to his means. If the heavy load can be taken from one poor child's life, it will be something done which will never be regretted, and which may be remembered in that day when the dread account of all our deeds, good and evil, is made up.

Delusive Prosperity.

San Francisco journals bewail the lack of enterprise in their city, and the lack of property in their State. The city has ample banking capital, as compared with Chicago and other cities east of the Mississippi, but transacts, relatively, much less business. The State, with almost boundless resources, suffers in every direction from the absence of development. Vast areas of desirable land are unoccupied and untilled. Mining enterprises have not, as a rule, fulfilled expectations; there have been more blanks than prizes—more losses than profits. The people of a State which obtains genuine money by mere digging, pay from ten to twenty-four per cent. annually for its use. In a word, there are stagnation and depression where activity and prosperity might be expected to abound. The El Dorado of the Union is really among the poorest and least progressive of its members.

For this condition of things the people of California may thank only themselves. They have driven off the capital and enterprise of which they now confess their need. Their refusal to avail themselves of the legal-tender currency was a blunder whose ill effects have long been apparent. Their own moneyed men came East to take advantage of the premium on gold accumulations; and Eastern capitalists refused to employ their means in a State which did its utmost to exclude greenbacks from circulation. Desirable citizens were thus driven away; the assistance now earnestly invoked has been by this policy systematically repelled. The result is conspicuous in the dullness, the want of business faith and spirit, the indifference to great mercantile and industrial opportunities which exhibit San Francisco in unfavorable contrast to other cities, and in the slow growth of population, the paucity of manufactures, and the neglect of magnificent natural resources in all parts of the State.

Land monopolies have had something to do with the tardy progress of settlement and agriculture. The best lands are in the hands of companies and speculators, who hold them at prices above their value, and retard the improvements which are essential to the contentment of any population worth having. The State does not grow, simply because it has been rendered unattractive. Minnesota, with not a tithe of the natural advantages possessed by California, has prospered infinitely more, for reasons that are apparent. In the one case reliance is placed upon nature's bounty, and thrift and persistent hard work are at a discount. In the other, energy and enterprise have been at a premium from the first, and a marvellous advance in population and wealth are the immediate results.

In the next place, California illustrates anew the general unprofitableness of mining enterprises, where the precious metals are concerned. Mining was well enough when gold was to be had by digging and panning, —though even then the lucky ones were only a small percentage of the crowds engaged in the work. But mining in organized forms, with costly machinery and under skilled and scientific direction, is quite a different affair. Only careful management and great good fortune can render it profitable. The Mariposa estate has never yielded common interest on its cost, and there are scores of gold mines in California and Colorado, and of silver mines in Nevada, of which the same story must be told. Every ounce of the precious metal obtained in these instances costs many times its value. Of course, there are gold and silver properties which have paid their owners magnificently,—but they are exceptional both in their richness and their management. Distant capitalists cannot be blamed if they listen incredulously to tales of mineral riches, and prefer to invest their money in enterprises of a more certain character.

The prevailing distrust is, however, justified by unpleasant experiences of another sort. Gold and silver mines are doubtful investments under the most favorable auspices. What shall be said of them when considered in connection with the barefaced frauds of which they have often been the pretext? California, Colorado, Nevada, Montana, Idaho,—all suffer from the rascality that has been perpetrated under the pretense of selling valuable mining claims. The Eastern States and England have been alike victimized. Millions of dollars have been abstracted from this City alone by scoundrels who succeeded in persuading capitalists, large and small, that fortunes were hidden in gold and silver mines. Half a dozen years ago, the number of Colorado gold mining companies organized in New-York was legion, and nearly all of them are now remembered as swindles of the first water. Nevada came next into the market, and left a similar impression. The Californians cannot wonder if prudent Eastern people prefer to keep their money nearer home.

Human Life at a Discount.

One would imagine that our country had begun to feel the pressure of over-population, so careless have we become regarding the preservation of human life. Whatever be the cause, it is certain that it has become very common to make the acquisition of a few dollars an object not to be interfered with by any scruple about the preservation of life. Every one knows the reflection of HOOD'S poor shirt-maker, that her tear-stained stitches were in reality those of her own winding-sheet. For the last four weeks a building was in course of construction in West Thirty-sixth-street, which was intended for a piano-forte factory, but was actually destined to become a tomb. The building was eight stories high, and was completed at the rate of two stories a week. The roof was put on yesterday, and the stately pile, extending the full length of a block, was probably satisfactory enough to its architects. But the plan had not been approved by the Inspector of Buildings. That made little difference. The rapidity of the workmanship was considered a triumph of the builder's art. No square or level could have made the lofty walls plumb, as they swayed under the pressure of the first gale they had faced, and the practiced handicraftsmen saw very readily that, in spite of plans and specifications, duly framed, nothing could prevent the great structure from becoming very shortly an avalanche of brick and mortar. And so, as rats are wont to do with doomed ships, they deserted the building, which now visibly bent to every gust of the boisterous wind. On the next lot was a small brick tenement, in which, at 9 o'clock yesterday morning, were about a dozen persons. Less than half an hour later, four of these were dead and buried under the mingled ruins of their home and the monstrous structure that had grown up beside it only to crush it. We do not seek to prejudge a case to which a strict and unfaltering investigation must be given. But it is impossible to ignore the fact that this was a calamity which might have been avoided. Where the blame rests must be determined, or public safety is an empty phrase. No matter whether the walls were too thin, the mortar imperfect, the plan defective, or the haste of construction dangerous, a community that, as a whole, still esteems human life as something to be sacredly guarded, will demand to know the truth, and ought to find no obstacles in the way of reaching it.

Taken in connection with a catastrophe that appeals too powerfully to the imagination to be disregarded, the evidence given yesterday before Coroner SCHIRMER, regarding the quality of petroleum sold in this City, may appear rather less striking. Rightly viewed, it has a more terrible significance still, for it means that all but three-quarters per cent. of the lamp-oil used by the poor of New-York is a perpetual danger to human life. In other words, ninety-nine and a quarter per cent. of the petroleum sold in the Metropolitan District is a compound which ought to be destroyed, and the manufacturers of which ought to be punished. It must strike an inquiring Frenchman very strangely to find that it is possible under a Government "by the people for the people" to expose stuff for sale which in Paris would be esteemed so perilous that it would be, after the simple application of the official test, straightway consigned to the Seine. Some people expect great things in large cities from a salutary despotism. We are, unfortunately, encumbered with a despotism which is not even wise enough in its generation to make itself useful.

Shamesshima Got.

No longer willing to remain in the state of seclusion from other nations to which the policy of their former rulers condemn them, the Japanese have at length determined to accredit an ambassador to the West. The official chosen as representative of the rapidly-progressive "Empire of the Rising Sun" rejoices in the unusual name of SHAMESHIMA GOT, and he will doubtless before long figure in the visitors' book of one or other of our City hotels. The appointment of an accredited native representative, unsolicited by foreign officials and, as we learn, originating entirely with themselves, is calculated to increase the growing respect felt for the Japanese in this and other civilized countries. Unlike the Chinese, who dispatched to foreign States natives of a rank too humble to give dignity in the eyes of their fellow-countrymen to the position they filled, the Japanese have chosen a man of respectable antecedents, and who but very lately held important office at one of the open ports. In another matter, also, they ignore the example set them by our Celestial friends. Instead of selecting foreigners, at enormous salaries, to perform the duty of interpreters and translators, they provide a competent secretary and linguist in the person of another Japanese official, SHIWODA SABURA, who is reported to be a man of some ability and considerable acquirements. Of the remainder of the suite no particulars have as yet reached us; but judging from the thorough way in which their official measures are, as a rule, carried out, there need be no doubt that capable and talented men will be chosen for the various positions. The journal of the embassy dispatched to the West in 1860-62, and which was published shortly after its return to Japan, evinced keen observation, and an admirable sense of the direction in which their countrymen needed lessons from the advanced civilization amid which the travelers found themselves.

Solid results may be expected from this movement, inasmuch as the Japanese have already shown their desire to emerge from their former isolation. With the complete failure of the Chinese mission to accomplish any useful end before us, it would, perhaps, be imprudent to indulge in too sanguine hopes. The difference, however, which exists between the two peoples justifies a greater belief in Japanese desire for progress than can by any possibility be extended to their neighbors.

Complementary Marriages.

Marriage, which ought, it would seem, to be the most deliberate, as it is ordinarily the most momentous, of human contracts, is unhappily too often the result of transient whim or trivial circumstance. In this, as in other things, the truth of Bassanio's maxim appears. Women and men alike "are still deceived by ornament," and the color of a tress, or the sparkle of an eye, a dimple, or a smile, is made the treacherous basis of what is hoped will prove a life-long happiness. Without going so far as that reformer who would have us discard personal prepossession entirely in the matter, and select husbands and wives pretty much as we match horses, it is safe to say that in marrying, people are usually too little guided by judgment, and too much by fancy or caprice. The fancy is commonly inspired by some real or suppositious charm, not often by an acknowledged defect. The Japanese who finds a charm in the blackened teeth of his wife, or the Hottentot who measures his mistress' loveliness by her weight and the flatness of her nose, errs no doubt by the standard of a civilized taste, but does homage to beauty by his own. But there are not wanting curious examples of matrimonial choice founded on recognized deformity. The deaf and dumb, for instance, usually intermarry, perhaps from preference as well as necessity; and now we have a Chicago lady, who has unhappily lost a leg, advertising for a husband similarly unfortunate. Possibly she may be animated by the same spirit of heroic economy which led Gen. HOWARD, when his left arm was shot off in one of the battles of the Peninsula, to suggest to Gen. KEARNEY, who had lost his right arm, that hereafter they should buy their gloves together. It may be thrift in the matter of foot-gear that moves this Chicago husband-hunter. We trust her desires may be gratified, even though the precedent seems, to a true lover of his species, an undesirable one. In Sparta she would not have been allowed to marry at all, and today, in some less civilized countries than ours, she and her prospective bridegroom would be still more harshly dealt with. Here we do not so subordinate the happiness of the individual to the good of the race, and with a railroad or steamboat accident occasionally, dispensations not likely to be wanting, there is no reason why an indefinite number of one-legged damsels should not be made happy by an equal supply of imperfect but complementary swains.

MINOR TOPICS.

It appears that TWEED, SWEENY and their friends have "sworn off" from further partnership in street-paving jobs. These men, as most people are aware, are not without a certain kind of low cunning, and they know perfectly well that frauds in street paving cannot be hidden from the public. After that stupendous job of putting down a "ponlitice" pavement in Fifth-avenue, some time ago, they have been afraid to have much to do with contracts for touching the up-town streets. So Mayor HALL has received a hint to veto all jobs of the kind—you see these vetoes make a good show of honesty, and cost the Ring nothing. They can get more by publishing an extra number of the Transcript any day than by paving a street. We need not say that the Mayor makes a wonderful merit of pricking these little bubbles, while the huge balloons of his friends darken the air. He and his associates understand the way to

"Compound for sins you are inclined to
By damning those you have no mind to."

While TWEED and SWEENY can steal about seventy thousand dollars at one haul by publishing a rag called the Transcript, they can afford to throw over the luckless inventors of pavements.

The debate on Gen. BUTLER'S Amnesty bill in the House yesterday, while developing a superfluity of mere verbiage, was important as showing very conclusively the radical diversity of sentiment on the question which exists among the members of the Republican Party. Mr. LAWRENCE, of Ohio, presented the question fairly enough from the one side, while Mr. FARNSWORTH, of Illinois, and Mr. SARGENT, of California, gave a very able statement of the arguments in favor of almost universal amnesty. The speech of Mr. COX, of New-York, may have contributed considerably to the amusement of the House; it can scarcely be said to have made any appreciable contribution to the proper materials of the debate. In the Senate the progress made with the discussion of the resolution on the removal of political disabilities amounted only to a speech by the introducer, Senator SCHURZ. The importance of this oration will be generally measured rather by its position as an elaborate personal vindication than as a defense of a great measure of national policy. The interest with which this oration has been awaited was mainly due to its position as a commentary on the late election in Missouri. The connection of this struggle with the subject immediately before the Senate was of a tolerably direct kind, but was made the occasion of bringing in a variety of subjects whose immediate relevancy was rather less apparent. With Senator DRAKE'S reply it is to be hoped that the personal phase of the debate may close.

In the multitude of reports and contradictions relating to the European war, only two present any features of interest. It is obvious that the impression prevails in the French Provinces that a great sortie has been made from Paris, and that it has met with unexpected success. The probabilities seem rather against any such event, since it is not very easy to conceive what reason the Government at Bordeaux could have for withholding good news from the people. Unless the retrograde movement toward Paris of the Prussian Army on the Loire, can be considered as bearing out the report, it appears at present entirely without support. The prospects of an armistice are improved, owing to the necessity of France taking part in the forthcoming conference on the Eastern question, and the consequent necessity of an election for a Constituent Assembly being held, so that the existing Government may be ratified or another put in its place.

Mr. BERGH has long been engaged in a work which will cause his name to be honored for many a year to come. He has been the means of preventing great cruelty and suffering in a world where there must always be too much, and we hope he has sometimes succeeded in softening the "brutal" instincts of the creature called man. It never fell within Mr. BERGH'S province to protect game, but the New-York Sportsmen's Club has undertaken that task, and we are glad to learn that it is meeting with success. It seems far too horrible to be true, but we believe it is a fact that people actually exist, calling themselves civilized, who have eaten woodcock at Spring, and quail at Midsummer—offenses which indicate not merely a degraded taste, but a total and hopeless depravity of morals, calculated to defy the wholesome precepts and good example of Brother SHERMAN himself. People who have reveled in the loathsome orgies referred to must now understand that game can only be sold in due season. Mr. ROYAL PHELPS pokes a bit of quiet fun at some of his friends, when he says that henceforth the "gentlemen of New-York, who are ignorant of the nature of trout, will not be exposed to have their cooks put these fish on the table, when they are as unfit to eat as the meat of a cow would be while sucking her calf, or a hen while hatching her chickens." Verbum sap. That brings the matter home to the humblest intellect. The New-York Sportsmen's Club deserves all encouragement and success, and we hope it will never leave off its work until the man who would eat game out of season would be regarded by the community pretty much as JOHN JACOB ASTOR or MOSES TAYLOR is now.

The Brooklyn Union is of the opinion of Hiuellen, that "there is figures in all things." Our contemporary draws, however, a parallel somewhat more instructive than the memorable one of the honest Welshman. It finds a strong analogy subsisting between our local Ring potentate SWEENY, and the Democratic arbiter of the destinies of Brooklyn, better known as "Boss" MCLAUGHLIN. The comparison fits very neatly, even to the taking of active Republicans into Democratic pay. The Union more than hints that among the items of unavoidable expenditure of the Brooklyn Water Board, to meet which the citizens are about to be charged higher rates, will be found the salaries of sundry politicians who earn their wages by weakening the front of Republican opposition. We admit that our contemporary has proved Brooklyn to possess "a faithful imitation of the Metropolitan model" of City government.

It is a pity that the elder DISRAELI never followed up his work on the Quarrels of Authors, with another on the quarrels of actors. Whenever the latter history comes to be written, the experiences of Mr. FECHTER, in Boston, will occupy a prominent place. Who has been most to blame in this ugly affair, we should be very sorry to have to decide. At present the Boston people are likely to be divided into two sets—the Fechterites and the Wallackites. Perhaps the ladies may even invent sets of colors to denote which side they have espoused. The Bostonians are rather apt to take a man up with great enthusiasm, and then suddenly drop him down again, and perhaps Mr. FECHTER has suffered a little from this tendency. We must leave all that to posterity to decide—and posterity will clearly have enough upon its hands. The public only know that both Mr. J. W. WALLACK and Mr. FECHTER are excellent actors, and if they cannot go and see them together, why they will go and see them separately. There are plenty of good-natured people who will enjoy the quarrel as it stands, without our adding any fuel to the fire.

AMUSEMENTS.

Musical and Theatrical.

ANNOUNCEMENTS AND NOTES.

The concert tendered to Mr. HARRY SANDERSON, by his friends, and which was to have been given at Steinway Hall on Friday last, is to take place this evening. Miss MARY O'GRADY, Miss JENNIE KEMPTON, and Messrs. HILL, THOMAS and MORGAN, are to be Mr. SANDERSON'S principal assistants....The second rehearsal for the second concert of the Philharmonic Society will begin at 2½ o'clock this afternoon....We believe that the obstacles which seemed likely to prevent the fulfillment of intentions of a brief season of Italian opera at the Fourteenth-street Theatre have been removed, and that the plans of Mr. DE VIVO are now likely to be carried out. A series of six or twelve representations is anticipated, with M. LEFEBRE, Mme. ROSE CHILLAG, and Signori SUSINI and REYNA as the leading artists....On Saturday evening, Mme. VIARDI-MARTI will give a concert at CHICKERING'S rooms....The annual performance in aid of the French Benevolent Society will take place at the Grand Opera-house, tomorrow evening. "Les Brigands" will be sung, M. HITTEMANNS will act in a little piece called, "Les Conférences de Beaubichon," and a brief concert will be part of the bill. The assemblance then gathered at the Grand Opera-house is fitted among all audiences to appreciate the best points of the representation, and its members will therefore be sorry to learn that severe indisposition will prevent Mlle. LEA SILLY from contributing to the regular or to the miscellaneous entertainment....Mr. MAX STRAKOSCH has sued the Rochester Union for libel, and lays the damages at $10,000. A lengthened series of articles, referring to the entertainments promised by Mr. STRAKOSCH as "the Nilsson swindle," and launching insults upon the lady's manager, induced the plaintiff to seek reparation in the Courts for assaults, which cannot for a moment be mistaken for criticism. Apropos of the Chicago season, a Chicago dispatch, forwarded yesterday and received last evening, says: "The sale of season tickets for the Nilsson Concerts was commenced at the Opera-house this morning, and before the closing hour every ticket was sold. The line, which extended from the box-office into the street, was formed at 7 P. M., yesterday. The sale of tickets for single concerts will take place to-morrow.... An amateur theatrical entertainment, given for the purpose of raising a fund wherewith to educate children left destitute after the war, is to be given at the Union League Hall this evening. The comedy "Everybody's Friend" will be produced, and from the active preparations which have been made for its performance, the audience will have a right to expect an unusually satisfactory representation.

Tidings by Balloon.

Messrs. STEINWAY & SONS yesterday received by way of England a "balloon letter," addressed to Miss CHRISTINE NILSSON, and dated from the French capital, Nov. 24. The weight of the epistle was not an eighth part of that of the lightest missive transmitted from one American lady's home to another, and its mere form spoke with strange eloquence of the exigencies of a dark hour for France. The letter was at once remailed to Detroit.

GENERAL TELEGRAMS.

THE SOUTH

The North Carolina Impeachment Case—A Committee of the House Appear in the Senate—A New-Orleans View of Mr. Butler's Amnesty Bill—The Donaldsonville Homicides.

RALEIGH, N. C., Dec. 15.—The House today sent a committee of three to the Bar of the Senate, impeaching Gov. HOLDEN, and demanding that their late order in the matter. On informing the Senate that articles of impeachment would be soon produced, the Senate replied that it would consider the matter and take order therein. The articles of impeachment, it is believed, will be shortly submitted and the High Court of Impeachment organized, the Chief Justice of the State presiding.

NEW-ORLEANS, Dec. 15.—The Times says that the Amnesty act proposed by BUTLER is an aggravation of the wrongs already inflicted upon the people of the South through the various disfranchising acts of Congress, the product of insatiable vindictiveness. BUTLER thus seeks to punish the South for the estimate in which the people hold him, and for the maledictions they have heaped upon him. The bill offered by BUTLER is the worst of all these measures of wrong, and is a gross violation of the Constitution.... Judge DURELL has granted writs of habeas corpus for DAVID PIERCE, JOHN C. OLIVER and CELESTINE OLIVER, all colored, charged with killing Judge LAWS and Mayor SCHOENIGG at Donaldsonville. They were released, but rearrested at the instance of the State.

Amnesty in Virginia—The State Debt in the Senate—Republicans Repudiated.

RICHMOND, Va., Dec. 15.—The Republican State Central Committee, last night, adopted a resolution praying Congress to pass a general Amnesty bill, by only two dissenting votes.... The question of the State debt was up in the Senate this morning. The tenor of the speeches was in favor of carrying the matter of West Virginia's share of the debt before the United States Supreme Court, and if payment was not compelled there, then Virginia will settle the whole debt. All opposed any idea of repudiating it.

Fatal Shooting Affrays in California—A Man Killed by the Sniter of His Daughter—A Farmer Kills His Hired Man.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 13.—Mr. CHARLES E. FISHER, the business manager of the Sacramento Daily Reporter, and State printing expert, was shot dead in his own house, last night, by CHAS. DELL, a young man who was paying his attentions to the daughter of Mr. FISHER, and who had just been ordered by him to leave the house. Mr. FISHER had struck DELL several blows on the head with a cane before the third and fatal shot was fired. ....At Colusa, Cal., yesterday, "Dad" SHEPARDSON, a farmer, and LEE STEVENS, an employe, had a fight. STEVENS attacked with a pitchfork, and SHEPARDSON endeavored to defend himself with a revolver, firing four shots, two of which went through the lungs of STEVENS, and the others went through his own thigh and body. The two men were wounded mortally.

Murder of a Farmer by a Claimant for His Farm—Popular Indignation.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 15.—JACK BELL, an old resident of Los Angeles, was murdered yesterday by MIGUEL LACHENAS, who claimed the land that BELL was plowing. After shooting BELL, LACHENAS went to the city and gave himself up. LACHENAS is known to have committed three murders previously, and the citizens are terribly incensed against him. The examination of the prisoner has been postponed until Saturday, but it is feared the citizens will attempt to lynch him o-night.

Blown from the Top of a Car and Run Over—The Weather at the Top of Mount Washington.

HARTFORD, Conn., Dec. 15.—A very high wind prevailed in this vicinity today. JAMES CONLAN, a brakeman on the Hartford and New-Haven Railroad, was blown from the top of the train, while adjusting the brake, and fell between the cars, fourteen of which passed over him, cutting off one leg. He is alive, but not expected to recover.

BOSTON, Dec. 15.—Prof. HUNTINGTON reports the summit of Mount Washington, 14th of December, at 2 P. M.: Thermometer, 22°; barometer, 29.05; wind, north-west; velocity of wind, fifty miles per hour; snowing clouds on mountains very dense; thickness of frost on Tip-top House, eighteen inches.

SUMMIT, Mount Washington, Dec. 15.—At 7 P. M. to-night the barometer stood 29.90°; thermometer 5° below zero; wind west; velocity of wind, 92 miles per hour.

A High-School Building Burned—A Portion of Waterbury, Conn., Threatened with Destruction.

WATERBURY, Conn., Dec. 15.—A fire broke out in the large and handsome High-school building in this city, about 10½ o'clock to-night, and, in spite of the efforts of the Fire Department, the building was destroyed, owing to high wind prevailing. It is midnight, and the fire is still raging fiercely, and threatens destruction to that portion of the city. The loss to the city, from the destruction of the school, will be about $75,000; insured in the agency of J. W. SMITH here. The amount of the insurance is unknown.

CONCORD, N. H., Dec. 6.—The celebrated case known as the "Consent Shaker" case, which has been in litigation some six years, has at last been decided by a Board of Referees. The referees have spent 180 days on it, as several years of business accounts were involved, the transactions being complicated. The Consent estate is awarded $6,193 47 as debt, and $1,600 36 as costs. The Consent heirs and the Shakers reside in Enfield, where great interest has been caused throughout the various trials.

DOVER, N. H., Dec. 15.—A fire in Union Village, last night, burned MITCHELL & Co.'s tannery and A. F. WOOD's grocery. The village library and the property of Unity Lodge Free Masons were also destroyed.

READING, Penn., Dec. 15.—Messrs. FUNK, RAMSHOWER & Co.'s steam planing mill was destroyed by fire this evening. Loss over $30,000. Insurance small. The origin of the fire is unknown.

CHICAGO, Dec. 15.—Prof. WILLIAM CHAUVENET, the distinguished mathematician and astronomer, died in St. Paul, Minn., Tuesday morning. His remains will be taken to St. Louis for burial.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 15.—The bill to create a paid Fire Department for this city passed the Councils to-night, and only awaits the Mayor's signature to become a law.

PITTSBURG, Penn., Dec. 15.—FRANCIS BADGER, a well-known New-York printer, was found dead in bed at his boarding-house this morning.

CONCORD, N. H., Dec. 15.—Blowing a strong gale from the north-west, with occasional snow squalls. Thermometer 18°.

FORTY-FIRST CONGRESS.

THIRD SESSION.

SENATE....WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.

MEMORIAL.

Mr. RAMSEY, of Minnesota, presented a memorial from the manufacturers of letter envelopes, printers and stationers, protesting against the practice of the Government in the purchase and sale of stamps. Referred to the Committee on the Post-office.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Bills were introduced and referred as follows:

By Mr. REVELS, of Mississippi—To aid in the repair and construction of levees in the State of Mississippi. Mr. REVELS gave notice of his intention to address the Senate upon the subject at an early day.

By Mr. RAMSEY, of Minnesota—To regulate international correspondence by telegraphic lines between the United States and foreign countries. Referred to the Committee on Post-offices and Post Roads.

By Mr. LEWIS, of Virginia—To incorporate the National Mining and Manufacturing Company of Washington. Referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. SAWYER, of South Carolina—To provide for the sale of certain lands in North and South Carolina belonging to the United States, and for other purposes. Referred to the Committee of the Judiciary.

By Mr. WILLIAMS, of Oregon—To amend the second section of the Judiciary act of March 3, 1869, by substituting the words "five hundred dollars" for the words "fifty dollars." Referred to the Committee of the Judiciary.

By Mr. BUCKINGHAM, of Connecticut—Providing that hereafter no tax shall be imposed or collected upon any unearned premiums or undistributable sum added to the contingent funds of any insurance company. Referred to the Committee of Finance.

BILLS PASSED.

Mr. MORTON, of Indiana, from the Military Committee, reported a joint resolution in aid of certain colleges and universities, allowing the detail of supernumerary army officers to professorships, with an amendment restricting its provisions to those officers exclusively.

Mr. SHERMAN, of Ohio, inquired whether the bill relating to civil leave these officers subject to be transferred by the War Department, and was answered affirmatively.

The bill was passed.

On motion of Mr. NYE, of Nevada, the bill for a change of jurisdiction of the Territorial Legislature was passed.

Mr. WILSON, of Massachusetts, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported an original bill, which was at once taken up and passed, amending the twelfth section of the act for the reduction of the army by substituting the words "1st day of July, 1870" for the words "1st day of January," wherever it occurs in said section, so as to extend the time for mustering out supernumary officers, &c.

Several House bills to remove political disabilities of citizens of Virginia were passed.

INDEFINITELY POSTPONED.

Mr. HARLAN, of Iowa, from the Committee on Indian Affairs reported adversely the bill to establish a Department of Indian Affairs, and it was indefinitely postponed.

Mr. CHANDLER, of Michigan, from the Committee on Commerce, also reported adversely the House bill constituting Jersey City a port of entry, and it was indefinitely postponed.

OTHER BILLS REPORTED.

Mr. CHANDLER, of Michigan, from the Committee on Commerce, reported favorably with merely verbal amendments the bill introduced by him recently, authorizing the President, in his discretion, to suspend by proclamation, the operation of all laws allowing the privilege of bonded transportation to foreign merchandise consigned to Canada and Mexico; and also the privilege of navigating the waters of the United States accorded to Canadian vessels.

Mr. MORTON, of Indiana, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported favorably the bill to refund to the States the interest on money borrowed to equip, pay and transport troops for the United States service during the late war.

Mr. BUCKINGHAM, of Connecticut, from the Committee on Commerce, reported, with an amendment offered by Mr. CAMERON, the bill to incorporate the Southern Express Company.

REMOVAL OF POLITICAL DISABILITIES.

At 1:30 o'clock the Senate, on motion of Mr. SCHURZ, of Missouri, took up the resolution offered yesterday by that Senator declaring in favor of the removal of all political disqualifications as soon as the imperative public necessity which dictated their imposition had ceased. Mr. SCHURZ then delivered an address of unusual length, to which the Senate listened with marked attention.

He reviewed the history of the party division in Missouri, for which he said he and those who acted with him had been denounced as traitors to the Republican cause, the interference at the solicitation of his colleague (Mr. DRAKE) of the National Executive, by which a State contest had acquired more than local interest, and the subsequent defeat of the President with all his patronage by the triumph of the very principles upon which he had been elected. The probabilities of the formation of a new party nucleus, and the prospects of the reformat in the civil service and revenue were also referred to.

Commencing with an allusion to the resolution, as the expression of a sentiment which had received an emphatic indorsement at the recent election in Missouri, and to an existing agreement between his colleague (Mr. DRAKE) and himself, that his own speech should be made before the withdrawal of the latter from the Senate, Mr. SCHURZ proceeded to show that the disfranchisement of persons engaged in the rebellion was a temporary expedient, a measure of safety rendered by the new social condition in the South consequent on the close of the war. He held that the removal by the party which imposed them, and while still in its ascendency in the Government, of all political disqualifications, especially of the exclusion of large numbers of people from the ballot-box, was essential to the restoration of fraternal feeling, at present that such measures had not resulted from vindictiveness, but necessity, and as bringing the late rebels to a full realization of their share with ourselves in the institutions and greatness of a common country. These were among the reasons governing his course in the late movement.

Quoting from the resolution offered by himself in the National Republican Convention of 1868, declaring the Republican Party in favor of the removal of political disabilities as soon as compatible with the public safety, and of welcoming back to the Union the loyal people among the late rebels who would accept the new order of things, he said this was a part of the platform on which Gen. GRANT was made President. But how had that promise been carried out in Missouri? Only by a victory over the Republican Party, instead of upon its good faith and by its assistance. When, therefore, the party had resisted enfranchisement after party honor commanded them to grant it, what hope could Republicans have of winning over to their ranks the re-enfranchised? The principal opponents of the measure present within the Republican ranks were those whose whole political stock in trade consisted of the battle cries of the civil war, who would forever roll the word "rebel" as a sweet morsel under their tongues, and that class of politicians whose whole end in political life was to monopolize the local offices.

Mr. SCHURZ denied the assertion of his colleague in a printed speech circulated in the Senate that the opposition was not so much to enfranchisement itself as against the constitutional amendment as a method of effecting it. He referred to some fifty or sixty newspapers which, led by the central organ at St. Louis, directly protested against the thing itself. In order to prevent the indorsement of the enfranchising amendment to the Constitution, the Republican State Convention was manipulated in advance by giving to the colored voters of the State a representation double that allowed to the white population, and so disciplining them that that race, against whom so many prejudices were still alive, should, in Missouri, exercise their virgin right of suffrage to continue the disfranchisement of others.

The speaker's unsuccessful efforts in the Convention in behalf of the enfranchising amendment, until he and his friends went out from the Convention, and of a third party, as he claimed the honor, principle and banner of the Republican Party, were successively referred to, as also the sweeping character of political disqualifications in Missouri, where, by the provisions of the State Constitution, persons could be disfranchised not only for disloyal acts, but for sympathy experienced, or implied even, of the remotest kind. Consistent Union men, of life-long devotion to the Government, for merely expressing a hope that their relatives in the rebel army would return home safely, were disfranchised for sympathy with those engaged in rebellion. He (SCHURZ) knew scores of men who had served three and four years in the Union Army, and had been disabled in the service, who had been disfranchised for harmless language uttered either before they donned the blue or since the war. The atrocity of the abuse which had developed themselves under the system of disfranchisement was shown by the speaker at some length in the absolutely irresponsible powers of the registration officers, the right of any citizen to vote being completely at the mercy of any villain who happened to be a registration officer, while there was no remedy for the grossest of outrages. The fact, too, was public, that in many counties these officers acted wholly in the interest of Radical candidates, the only consideration being as to the number of opposition votes to be stricken off to secure a majority. In one case as many as 300 voters were disfranchised upon secret affidavits. The Senator from New-York (Mr. CONKLING) at the last session had denounced the election frauds in New-York City, but that Senator would agree that the abomination was as great in stealing votes out of the ballot-box, under cover of law, as in Missouri, as in stuffing illegal votes into the ballot-box, as in New-York and Philadelphia. In this connection, he characterized as unqualifedly false the newspaper report that the Missouri "bolt" had anything to do with a revenue reform conspiring or originating in Washington. Personally, his convictions led him to oppose the protective system. Had the tariff question been the issue in Missouri, he thought the majority against the question would have been nearer 100,000 than 40,000. The question was discussed, but was not the overshadowing issue. He denied the allegation that the question might have been settled by referring it to the Legislature of 1871. Besides, such a course would have involved the defeat of the constitutional amendment then before the people, and, while failing to preserve party unity, would have transferred the struggle to the legislative district.

He then read from a speech delivered by his colleague, (DRAKE,) at a serenade, commenting upon a remark attributed to himself, that he "looked forward to the time when new parties would be formed." The conclusion of his colleague was that he (SCHURZ) designed taking the whole German element over to the Democratic Party to control the next Presidential election, and he then to be the great power behind the Democratic throne. This Mr. SCHURZ ridiculed as a morbid hallucination, as also his colleague's onslaughts upon the Germans. But he regretted that, while his colleague's insinuations had had no effect upon the people of Missouri, they seemed to have had a strong influence upon the mind of the President. He was convinced that the letter of the President to the Collector of Internal Revenue at St. Louis, condemnatory of the new movement, and the suspension of a number of Federal officers, mostly Germans, was instigated by his colleague. While the interference of the President in the State elections, by means of the patronage, had long been considered a matter of most questionable propriety and bad policy in far any circumstances, in the present case he was persuaded the President to interfere proved a most dangerous adviser. He then criticised the alleged misrepresentations of his colleague to the President, that the movement was designed as a war upon the Administration. Were he an enemy of the Administration he would not deplore the fact that the President lent an ear to such insinuations. To others in the interest of himself of factious opposition, he referred to his speeches of former years to show that he had uniformly held that Gen. GRANT in the Presidential chair would have the most inviting opportunities to restore the long-lost cordiality of sentiment between the Americans, and to bring on a new era of good feeling; that he would have more facilities than any preceding Administration to effect a thorough reform of the civil service, and a purification of our whole political machinery.

To the Administration he still gave his cordial support in the direction thus indicated. His friends in their movement had expected the President's sympathy, and the appearance of the St. Louis letter was to them a painful surprise. In those great words, "Let us have peace," Grant had led before his country, not as a creature of politicians, but as the very exponent of a moderate and conciliatory policy. If finally the Missouri election became a defeat of the Administration, the President must look to himself and his advisers for the responsibility. The President's own principles achieved a victory over his patronage. Had he only maintained a friendly neutrality the success of the B. Gratz Brown movement would have passed for a triumph of the President's principles, giving his thousands of friends where now he had lost hundreds. It may not be a fault but an advantage to the President that he had no opportunities for acquiring an extensive political experience, but the advisers, who pretended to be his friends, ought to have foretold the result of his interference and of his following the example of Presidents PIERCE, BUCHANAN and JOHNSON.

Passing from the perusal of various letters, showing that the Federal patronage in Missouri had been prostituted in giving color to attempts by Federal officers to levy black-mail for party purposes, Mr. SCHURZ referred to the President's avowal in favor of civil service reform. The attempt at civil service reform in Missouri was in true ANDREW JOHNSON style—to organize a bread and butter brigade; and it this was a fair indication of the President's meaning of reform, not much value was to be placed in the Presidential promise. He (SCHURZ) was glad of the President's following the advice of political managers. The Lord save the Administration and party if the same spirit is beneficent to govern their course. After asserting his allegiance to be due to Republican principles rather than to party discipline, he gave utterance to some speculations upon the probable formation of a new party, the popular belief that the mission of the Republican Party had ended, and remarked that the recent Democratic changes of position demonstrated that a new phase of development was upon us. The exhaustion of old issues, and the growing dissatisfaction and insubordination within the great parties, were confirmatory evidences; while, on the other hand, the questions of revenue reform, civil service reform, &c., were yet ephemeral issues. Upon the whole, within the prospect of a new party might at present appear premature, yet it would come with the necessity of a national crisis.

Mr. SCHURZ closed with an expression of his confidence in the ability of the Republican Party to become that new party, claiming for it the possession of the elements of a healthy regeneration.

Mr. DRAKE rose to reply, but, yielding to a general disposition to adjourn, confined himself to a demand upon his colleague for the proof of his assertion, in the speech just made, that he, (DRAKE,) many years before, had objected to the election of Hon. JAMES S. ROLLINS, his personal friend, as Governor of Missouri, because he might prove humble to the institution of slavery in that State.

Mr. SCHURZ replied that his information was based upon a letter received by him from Mr. ROLLINS himself.

Mr. DRAKE replied that he could recollect nothing of the kind; but, admitting the statement, he had only to say that a cause must be desperate indeed which depended for its vindication upon a remark made thirteen years ago. He gave notice that he would to-morrow reply at length to his colleague's speech.

At 5¾ P. M. the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

THE AMNESTY BILL.

The House resumed the consideration of the Amnesty bill.

Mr. BARRY, of Mississippi, argued against the exceptions contained in the bill and in favor of general and unconditional amnesty.

Mr. MONGER, of Ohio, argued on the same side. He said that if he had been framed for the express purpose of refusing political rights to the people of the South, it could not have done so more effectually; while, on the other hand, it provided amnesty for the robber, the burglar, the incendiary and the thief. He alluded to the fact that before a gun had been fired in the rebellion the resignation of 180 officers of the army—graduates of West Point—had been accepted by the constituted authorities of the United States; and he asked what greater aid and comfort could have been given to the rebellion than the furnishing of men with arms, captains and men skilled in war. He believed that had it not been for that act of the Federal Government, no hostile gun would ever have been fired outside of the limits of South Carolina.

Mr. FARNSWORTH, of Illinois, stated to the House that the Senate had reported back a unanimous report of the Committee on Reconstruction; nor did it have the approval of even a majority of the Committee. It was only permitted to be reported to the House. He declared that the provision of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution, which imposed political disabilities, was only intended to remain so long as reconstruction was incomplete, and until the rights of all persons were secured. He did not find that any person had asked Congress to make any exceptions in the matter of removing disabilities. He had seen no petition from any State in the South, or from any other quarter, and no remonstrance against redeeming all the people of the South. He had taken up, this morning, a Republican paper from Georgia, and found that its motto was, "universal amnesty." The colored people of the South asked for it. Having obtained their own rights, they, more liberal and more just than some members of Congress, were asking Congress to relieve their white brethren from the disabilities imposed upon them. The leading papers of all political parties in the country, editorial and non-editorial, were above advising the removal of all disabilities, with very few exceptions. The Republican Party outside of Congress was in favor of universal amnesty. He did not see any practicable or just way of making exceptions by classes. Gen. LONGSTREET, who held a high position by appointment of the President, would come under the exceptions in this bill. The parties to be excepted should be mentioned by name, not grouped in a class. The bill was a very irregular mixture. It contained some matters which might become law if adopted by a majority vote, and it contained other matters which could not become law unless adopted by a two-thirds vote. Such things should not be grouped together in the same bill. It was a cheat and a swindle to do so unless the bill were passed by a two-thirds vote. It would be in no sense a political bill, and would have nothing to do with political disability. It would then be merely a bill settling legal questions only, and should have come from the Judiciary Committee. He read from Lord MAHON's history to show the barbarities that had followed the Scotch rebellion of 1745, and to show that the Congress of the United States should not resort to that period to find a precedent for this bill. He declared himself very positive that there was something behind the bill—something covered up in the meal tub. While the people all over the country were looking for an act of amnesty, they were looking for bread, and Congress offered them in this bill a stone. Instead of being a bill to quiet suits in the South, it was a bill to foster and perpetuate suits that were now dead. Referring to the English act of amnesty of 1747, he remarked that although it was passed within two years of the restoration of peace, the loyalist historian whom he quoted (Lord MAHON) characterized the exceptions in it as "clogs." And now it was proposed, five and a half years after the close of the war, in a republic where amnesty comes from all the people and not from the crown, to clog with exceptions an act of amnesty. Who, he asked, was afraid that JEFFERSON DAVIS would come to Congress? The exclusion of men by classes would exclude the best brains and the best hearts in the South. The Republican Party would gain nothing by it. As had been said by a Democrat, yesterday, (Mr. MORGAN, of Ohio,) the Republican Party had lost by the course it had pursued. A little generosity exercised in proper time made friends and not enemies. It was so everywhere, and with all people. By excluding the classes proposed to be excepted, Congress only made the men competing them the deeper enemies. The sons of those men would be presented by them as candidates for office, instead of the fathers, and they would prove to be much more bitter than the fathers.

Mr. LAWRENCE, of Ohio, opposed the bill as bad in form, as wrong in some of its purposes, and, if it became a law, as pernicious in some of its consequences. Its title was more liberal, or more reckless, he did not know in which way to characterize it, than the bill itself. A serious objection to the bill was that it contained matter over which the President possessed the veto power, and matter over which he did not possess it. The moment that Congress, by a two-thirds vote, removed political disabilities, the bill became a law without the action or signature of the President, but other provisions of the bill would require the approval of the President. This incoherently he regarded as fatally defective in the bill. It seemed clear to him that the bill was unconstitutional in the attempt it made to annihilate the judgments made in favor of loyal citizens, to annihilate the rights of civil action of loyal citizens for wrongs committed by rebels in aid of the rebellion, and in the attempt to go into the Courts in time of peace to arrest the administration of criminal justice. In all these respects the bill was unconstitutional. He was opposed to it because it extended pardon and amnesty to murderers, robbers, ravishers and incendiaries. One great error which the Government had made was the failure at the close of the rebellion to punish its leaders for treason. A hundred first-class funerals at that time would have been worth a hundred amnesty bills. He believed that the time had not yet come when it was expedient to relieve all classes of rebels who did not choose to seek it, and who as a general rule, denied that they were guilty of anything wrong. He believed it still necessary that the State Legislatures should be in the hands of loyal men who legislate to pay the national debt, protect the interests of Union soldiers, their widows and orphans, and to maintain the rights of the enfranchised colored men.

Mr. NIBLACK, of Indiana, asked if Mr. LAWRENCE would not concede that hundreds of the most influential and meritorious men in the South were disfranchised?

Mr. LAWRENCE admitted that, but said that no meritorious man who had asked to be relieved from his disabilities had been refused relief.

Mr. NIBLACK inquired further whether the continued exclusion of these men did not really give them more consequence and influence in their own communities?

Mr. LAWRENCE replied that he did not believe that the depriving a man of the right to hold office added to his influence or power. He was in favor of amnesty, and would vote for it if he could; but, before granting it, he wanted some evidence it was safe, and that evidence had not yet been presented to the House.

Mr. COX, of New-York, said he believed that the dominant party in the House and in the country was in favor of universal amnesty. He did not find in the Message of the President anything about general amnesty. There was an expressive silence in it on that subject which he (COX) greatly regretted, more especially as the President was still in favor of repressive measures toward the Southern people, and had actually protruded those measures into other States out of the South. Still he was thankful to the gentleman from Massachusetts for reporting the bill, in spite of all obnoxious clauses, because it gave the House an opportunity to act on the subject. He expressed himself utterly surprised at the speech made to-day by the gentleman from Ohio (LAWRENCE). That gentleman had wished for a hundred first-class funerals after the war. Was that the gentleman's Christian spirit? What Sunday-school had he been raised in? What church did he belong to? Even FRANKLIN repudiated such a doctrine of revenge. He would read to the gentleman some sentiments written by Sir THOMAS BROWN, in his quaint style. Mr. COX read several quotations, including this one: "Let thine arrows of revenge fly short, as be aimed, like those of Jonathan, to fly past the mark."

Mr. LAWRENCE said he agreed to all that.

Mr. COX—If my friend is willing to stand by it, let him come up to the "anxious seat," and we will pray over him in a Christian spirit. [Laughter.]

Mr. LAWRENCE repeated his remark about agreeing to the sentiments read by Mr. COX.

Mr. COX—If the gentleman will come up and kneel down here, penitently, we will have a good old class-meeting over him. [Renewed laughter.] What was the title of the bill? It was a bill for general grace, timnesty and oblivion; but what was the bill itself? It was the play of "Hamlet," not only with Hamlet left out, with Polonius and the King and the Queen and all the other characters left out, except the little play within the play. It was like another of SHAKESPEARE's plays—"Shylock," with all his revenge was all thrown the bill. Wanting to restore the Christian spirit to a fallen world, and excepting the chief of sinners—the Souls of political offences! The offer of salvation should copy the eternal plan. Let all who repent and would be saved come and partake of the waters of life freely. This bill stereotyped hell. It was in no sense an amnesty. He had dreamed a dream last night, continued, he thought, by reading the Scriptures. [Laughter.] All through his dream appeared the gallant gentleman from Massachusetts. He was at one of the great camp-meetings on the coast of Massachusetts, near the gentleman's district, and that gentleman was in the middle of a great throng of disciples of JOHN WESLEY. There was a voice going round calling men to repentance. He thought he saw the gentleman from Massachusetts kneeling down at the old Methodist altar with the good brethren round him, and after a while the voice came and took up the song: "Amazing grace, how sweet the sound." [Laughter.] It seemed to him then that the gentleman was translated to another sphere, and he thought he could see him standing on the basement of the New Jerusalem, with white robes upon him, and a harp in his hand, singing, "Mercy is free, mercy is free." [Laughter.] He protested against the precedent cited yesterday by Mr. BUTLER for this bill. He protested against reproducing the barbarism of a bad country and of a bad age. He did not expect the gentleman from Massachusetts to cite an English precedent, in view of his prejudices against England. In conclusion, he invoked for the people of the South the principle of the Lord's Prayer, so that when all came to the Great Court of Heaven the general amnesty should include all.

Mr. WILSON, of Ohio, declared himself in favor of a general but not of universal amnesty. He was, therefore, in favor of the first five exceptions in the bill; he was in favor of general amnesty; not absolutely, but on conditions of repentance and reformation, on letting the dead bury their dead, for repentance in the form of a written confession of the crime, and a prayer for absolution. He fully approved of a remark once made by the gentleman from Tennessee, (Mr. MAYNARD,) that it was not proper to cast pearls before swine; he was in favor of relieving only those who asked for relief. Christianity did not require men to forgive their enemies unless their enemies desired to be forgiven, and asked absolution.

The debate here closed for the day, and, tomorrow being private bill day, and the House agreeing not to hold a session on Saturday, the bill went over till Tuesday next.

NEW BILLS INTRODUCED.

The following new bills were introduced today:

THE SPANISH THRONE.

The Election of a Monarch—A Speech Anticipated—The Programme for the Future—Bright Expectations—Possible Opposition to the New Regime—The National Finances—Prim and Topete.

From Our Own Correspondent.

MADRID, Friday, Nov. 25, 1870.

The Commission of twenty-eight Deputies appointed to proceed to Florence to notify to the Duke D'AOSTA his election by the constituent Cortes, took leave last evening of the Regent, and of the President of the Council of Ministers. They left immediately after at 10 o'clock by a special train for Cartharena, where they are to embark. Gen. PRIM thought it advisable to dispatch, a couple of hours before their departure, a regiment to the railway station to prevent all attempts at a hostile demonstration on the part of the population of the capital. Only a few Deputies and public functionaries accompanied the Commission to the station. Not a cheer, not a solicitation greeted them on their way. About fifty soldiers and a squad of Police agents went with them by the same train to Cartharena to prevent any display of "enthusiasm" en route. It was to "avoid any similar exhibition of "enthusiasm," I presume, that the members of the Commission thought it prudent not to enter the City of Cartharena, and to proceed straight from the station to the place of embarcation by skirting the town. The municipality of Cartharena, which is composed almost entirely of Republicans, did not think it even to offer a dinner to the Commission. They were to dine on board the iron-clads of the fleet, in which they are to be conveyed, immediately on their arrival. The first idea was to let the members of the Commission get out at Marseilles, but, on reflection, it was thought desirable to withdraw them from the "ovations" which the people of that city would, no doubt, have offered them.

ANTICIPATING A SPEECH.

M. ZORRILLA, President of the Cortes, had requested one of the secretaries of that body, to prepare the speech for him which he proposed to make to the Duke D'AOSTA on his arrival. He had even read it to the Ministry, who had approved of it, when a morning paper in Madrid published it en extenso et literatim. You can imagine the wrath of the President. He dismissed the employes of the Bureaux in the Cortes, and has sent them before the tribunals for abuse of confidence. I have just heard that the author of the speech intends to assert his claim to the ownership of it. He will lose his place, but the tribunal will find it rather an embarrassing matter to frame a charge against him. Do not imagine, however, that this contretemps will prevent M. ZORRILLA and his acolytes of the Commission from enjoying the good fare and the costly wines provided for them on board the vessels of war which are to convey them to their destination. Far from that, he has himself furnished the mess for the iron-clads, the expense of which amounts to twenty-five thousand dollars for each vessel. Another little detail en passant. It appears that the officers of the navy, whose enthusiasm in favor of the Duc D'AOSTA had not been very demonstrative, have been compelled to give up their posts on the vessels of the fleet to others chosen by the Minister for their warmer zeal for the new King.

PROGRAMME FOR THE FUTURE.

The squadron is to proceed to Genoa, where the Commission, like other suspicious people, will have to perform quarantine for three days. The Italian law is very rigorous in this regard, and no suspension of it could be obtained even in this exceptional case. The future King, if he comes here, which I still doubt, will only make his entrance into Madrid on the 15th of January next. This is the motive of the delay. According to the terms of the Constitution it devolves upon the Constituent Assembly to vote the Civil list. On the return of the President of the Cortes in ten or twelve days from this, this important question will be brought before it for consideration, and it will unquestionably give rise to exciting and passionate debates. On the other hand, Count CERUTTI has not concealed in his report to the Ministers of the Crown in Italy that the candidature of Prince AMADEUS had been received with great coldness throughout Spain, and at Madrid especially, and that in several Provinces it had given rise to bloodshed. On the reception of the report the Court of Florence sent to Madrid an Italian Deputy, charged to investigate in Madrid, and in the other great cities of Spain, the exact state of public feeling in regard to the election of the Duc D'AOSTA, and more especially the elements of which the opposition to it is composed. This diplomatist has already had at Madrid several conferences with former Ministers of the Provisional Government and a variety of other public men, and he has taken detailed notes of the very serious revelations which the persons consulted have made to him. The Prince will reply to M. ZORRILLA that the state of health in which the Princess DE LA CISTERNA, his wife, is in at present, will not permit him to come to Spain as soon as the Government at Madrid and he himself desires. The truth is that he wants to wait until he can see a little more clearly how the public feeling is likely to run in his regard before he pledges himself further. I know that at Florence the Ministers advise the Prince not to come to Madrid until the Cortes has voted the civil list of forty millions of reals (four million dollars) which he asks for. Neither the Prince nor the Italian Ministers think it advisable to neglect the precedent set by the late Emperor MAXIMILIAN, who refused to go to Mexico until the money question was settled.

BRIGHT EXPECTATIONS.

Before leaving, M. ZORRILLA took care to leave no time. He sent a circular letter to the 291 Deputies who had voted in favor of the Duke D'AOSTA, in which he says that the new dynasty will be the object of fierce attacks on the part of the hostile parties; that they are already preparing for the struggle, and that the Deputies who are friendly to the Duke must exercise their influence in the Provinces, so that adhesions shall be sent to the Government, covered with signatures in favor of his election. This circular is an incontestable proof that the enthusiasm of the Spaniards for the new King is more than doubtful, contrary to the assertions of Gen. PRIM in his dispatches to the court of Florence.

OPPOSITION TO THE NEW REGIME.

Count CERUTTI has not concealed from the King of Italy the fact that the old Conservative party, a portion of the army and the navy, the banking interest, and many of the old Ministers who accepted the constitution of 1869, see anything but favorable to the new dynasty. The Prince will wait to see whether the Carlists and the Republicans, who just now are kept down by force of arms, are likely to carry out their threats of insurrection, which they say is only postponed until next month.

THE NATIONAL FINANCES.

Every one knows in Florence as in Europe generally the precarious condition of the Spanish Treasury, which pays neither the clergy, the pensioners of the State, nor the professors of the primary schools, nor in fact the most pressing debts. It is desired to contract a fresh debt, the twelfth since the last revolution, in order that the new King shall be abundantly provided with money. M. FIGUEROLA, interrogated by Gen. PRIM on this subject, declared that in the present state of Europe it would be difficult to negotiate another Spanish loan. On the other hand several of the Spanish cities have protested that it is utterly impossible for them to pay the taxes imposed upon them. In Galicia there have been several manifestations against the Duc D'AOSTA, and the gendarmerie have been compelled to fire upon the people. As usual, numbers of persons were killed and wounded.

PRIM AND TOPETE.

A warm altercation took place recently between PRIM and TOPETE. It was near leading to a duel, but through the interference of friends the difficulty was arranged. TOPETE reproached the General with having swindled the revolution for his individual benefit, by delivering up Spain to a foreign King. There is but too much truth in the reproach.

THE REGENT.

The Regent is about to take up his abode in a private mansion belonging to him. He at least will be glad to cast off the responsibilities of power.

UNITED ITALY.

The Pope's Encyclical—Position of the Government—Neutrality—An Heir to the Spanish Throne—Earthquake Shocks—American Tourists—Art News.

From Our Own Correspondent.

FLORENCE, Tuesday, Nov. 29, 1870.

One of the topics of the week has been the Pope's Encyclical letter to the Catholic Bishops in all the world. The Holy Father scolds through two or three columns of the large print of the Italian newspapers. A half dozen or more of them jumped to print the message as soon as it was turned from the original Latin into the vulgate of the country, not for a moment dreaming that the censors of printing of the Italian Government would find anything to object to in the words of the Pope. But to the surprise and astonishment of everybody, all the journals that printed the letter were declared suppressed and put in accusation, the responses to be made before the Tribunal at a future day. In this last State paper—if such it may be called—the Pope exhibits himself in a rapture of indignation, and indulges a tone of insolence toward the King, and this is the reason why the document is put under legal ban. This box on the ear of the Sovereign is making some noise, and its echo may for some time be heard, although it causes no great smart to the royal cheek. VICTOR EMMANUEL would, without doubt, be willing to be cuffed by the Holy Father if he could be sure of receiving his blessing afterward. Like a good son, the King acknowledges the right of a father to punish his children, but not to hate them. For the rest, people feel happy that none are any longer exposed on the terrors of the wheel, thumb-screw and frying-pan of the Inquisition.

POSITION OF THE GOVERNMENT.

Meanwhile the work goes steadily on. There is no middle course for the Italian Government. Gen. LA MARMORA, the Governor of Rome, has said, and the Minister of Finance has repeated his words, "the question of Rome has reached the point when it has become to us a question of existence, and behind us is the abyss." The Pope, in his paper, says once more, distinctly, that he and his party will never, never yield, and so the case stands. The King is a little frightened, as he is made to bear the principal brunt of the Pope's rancorous condemnation, which is hardly fair, as the Constitution makes the Sovereign a leading agent only, and less responsible than Ministry or Parliament. As for the most intelligent minds among the leaders of reform, I think they care no more for the Pope's curse than does the world in general his bull against the aurora borealis or the November meteor.

FESTIVITIES.

Fortune has so many favors for Italy that the capital is kept in perpetual fêts. Now they are putting up the masts on which the gonfalons are to be hoisted in honor of the Spanish King delegation, already arrived at Genoa. They number more than one hundred, including the whole company, thus is to say, twenty-eight delegates, two Generals, sixty-one other officials, fourteen chamberlains, and twelve ushers. With all her sufferings and humiliations Spain has notions any of her swelling pretense, and thinks by adopting a Chinese method to add dignity to a commission which could just as well be executed by one or two persons. As might be expected, the newspapers are full of eloquent talk about the throne of CHARLES V.

AN HEIR TO THE SPANISH THRONE.

The wife of Prince AMADEO, the King elect of Spain, a day or two ago gave birth to her second son. The happy event taking place just as the father and mother are about to set off for their new country is accepted as a good sign. For the Spaniards, it is an additional assurance that the succession will be kept up. It is amusing to us republicans, who have not yet suffered the infliction of royal governors, to observe the splendor of Courtly blatter on these occasions of the birth and baptism of a scion of the sovereign stock. Several Ministers of State went up to Turin, to act as midwives, or to stand in the antechamber, at the moment of the important event. Mgr. JOHN BULMA, the Bishop of Turin in partibus infidelium, poured the baptismal water, and to the child was given the following jumble of names: VICTOR EMMANUEL TURIN JOHN MARY, with the addition of the title of Count of Turin.

EARTHQUAKE SHOCKS.

In different parts of the Italian peninsula within the past month, slight shocks of earthquake have been so frequent as to keep the ground in a continual jar. Except in the extreme south, no damage worth speaking of has been done. In the region of Florence, I believe, there is no historical record of serious damage ever suffered from such a cause, and the recent trembling was so little felt here as to be unnoticed, except by scientific observers, and these continually on the watch. Prof. PALMIERI, of the Observatory on Mount Vesuvius, was directed by the Government to go with his instruments to Forli, on the upper Adriatic coast, to take careful note of the frequent phenomena, and make report. On account of the illness of the Professor, a special scientific Commission has been appointed for the purpose.

AMERICAN TOURISTS.

Americans now come thronging into Italy in scores and hundreds. It is expected by bankers and inn-keepers that the number will be larger than usual the present Winter; indeed, more than in former years are here already. So much of Europe is taken up by the military camp, that the old field in which travelers wandered is narrowed, and nobody yet knows how much more the area may be reduced. Americans are nearly the only ones among great-world citizens who do not expect to find their country involved in the warlike complications still threatening. The English are here in smaller numbers, and are watching with anxious, if not timid attention, the stormy vapors hurrying across the Eastern horizon, and are trimming sail for a possible explosion. They have watched with characteristic phlegm the trials of others, and they now feel that their own and hour may be near.

ART NEWS.

With the prospect of seeing so many of their countrymen, American artists are working with hope. Fifteen or more sculptors and painters are resident here, and three or four times as many at Rome. Mr. GOULD has sold his statue of the "West Wind" to Mr. BARNES, of Brooklyn, and is getting ready to put into marble a colossal "The Statue of CLEOPATRA." The same artist, some time since transferred from clay to plaster, is now about to take on the purer element; or, as the phrase is, to "live in marble." Mr. EDWIN WHITE has finished several pictures, for which immediate sale has been found, and is now engaged on other commissions. He has taken a pleasant house and studio for five years. ANGELICO.

Business Champagne—Investigation by Revenue Officials.

Assistant Commissioner DARIN, of the Internal Revenue Department, and Supervisor S. B. DUTCHER have been engaged for the past few days in making an investigation in the manner in which imitation champagnes are made, for the purpose of ascertaining if they are subject to the internal revenue tax of $6 per dozen. In the course of the investigation these gentlemen have visited some half dozen or more establishments in the City, some of them quite large, where imitation champagnes are made. They have ascertained the quality of the wines used and the process of manufacture, and have become thoroughly satisfied upon the subject matter of their inquiry. Assistant Commissioner DARIN returned to Washington yesterday afternoon, and will make his report immediately. The process by which genuine wine is manufactured has been so recently described in the columns of the TIMES, that only an incidental allusion is necessary. The genuine wine is bottled before fermentation has ceased, and the carbonic acid gas is formed subsequently by the decomposition of vegetable matter remaining in the wine. In this way no artificial introduction of carbonic acid gas is made necessary. The manufacturers of imitation wine purchase the common sauterne, or white wine, in large quantities, and mix it with California rock or other native still wines, the fermentation of which has been artificially arrested, or has naturally ceased. This mixture is "doctored" with spirits to give it strength and then bottled, after which each bottle is charged with carbonic acid gas made by the incorporation of saltpetre sold with minimum whiting. The wine thus manufactured is sold in large quantities to dealers in this City, and also east, West and South. The only question to be determined by the internal revenue authorities is whether the manufactured wine is made from an article wholly foreign or mixed. If the former, the tax of $6 per dozen is not in point; if made from native wine, then the tax is claimed to be due and payable.

ANOTHER GREAT CHARITY.

New Home for Old and Indigent Females—The Plans of the Association—Description of the Proposed Building.

From the number of charitable and public institutions proposed in this City, many of the buildings for which are already in process of erection, it might be thought that the generosity of the citizens of the Metropolis was already too greatly taxed. The constantly increasing number of elegant public structures, evidences of the benevolence of those who have wealth, prove, however, that the contrary is the case, and that New-York may well claim for itself the proud title of the "City of Charities." The favorite location for a majority of these proposed institutions seems to be north of Thirty-fourth-street, and between Third and Fifth avenues. During the past year a detailed description of the buildings to be erected, either by public or private liberality, has been published in the TIMES as soon as the same were projected. To this already large list must now—just before the Christmas season—another one be added, which, with opportunities for extended usefulness cannot fail to alleviate much suffering. We refer to the erection of a new home for aged and indigent females, the Association of the "Home," now located at No. 221 East Twenty-fifth-street. The managers of this institution have long contemplated building on an enlarged scale, and for this purpose some years since purchased the plot of ground on Fourth-avenue, between Seventy-eighth and Seventy-ninth streets, with a front embracing the whole block, and having a depth on both streets of 175 feet. Plans for a large and elegant structure fronting on the avenue were prepared, and duly considered. The rise of property in this vicinity has, however, occasioned a change of plan, and the avenue front, with seventy-five feet in depth, has been sold. Plans for a new building upon the remainder of the lot have now been agreed upon, and its erection will be commenced at once. The description of the proposed building is as follows:

The lot is on Seventy-ninth-street, upon which the House will front, and is 100 feet wide, extending back to Seventy-eighth-street, a depth of 200 feet 4 inches. The proposed new building is to cover the entire front of the lot. The total depth, with a rear wing, will be 147 feet. In height the structure will be 83 feet, the divisions being a basement and five stories. The Home is to cost, exclusive of the value of the ground, $175,000. The style of architecture is Italian, with a French Mansard roof. The material is of Philadelphia brick, front and rear, with yellow stone trimmings, and liberal accommodations for 150 aged females will be provided. Both the front and rear elevations of the building are very handsome, the former being entered through a massive stone portico, with steps on each side, and entering the first story above the basement, which latter is entirely above the level of the sidewalk. Upon the rear of the building, a bay-window is carried up the two story, and a veranda for the third story. The grounds in the rear, on Seventy-eighth-street, and upon each side of the extension are to be tastefully laid out and ornamented with trees and shrubbery, and the interior arrangements of the building are as follows: In the basement will be a dining-room 100 by 18 feet, a kitchen 30 by 18, a laundry, servants' rooms, store-rooms, a modern refrigerator room, pantries, &c. The first floor above will be devoted to a chapel for the inmates of the institution, which is not denominational in its character; a reception room, dispensary, board room, matron's room, and twelve bedrooms. Upon this floor, on each of the four remaining stories, will be located two large bath-rooms, each containing two tubs, and other water conveniences. The four other floors are all divided into bedrooms, both single and double, all of which will be comfortably fitted up. The first floor is to be heated by steam, and as a novelty in this respect, each room has a separate flue, built in the wall, thus being separately provided with both hot and cold air. In all respects the institution is designed to be a model one of its class and an honor to the City. The architects of the edifice are Mr. THOMAS NITTAM, No. 408 Canal-street; the carpenters, YOUNGS, SONS & CO., and the masons, VAN DOLSEN & ARMOTT.

The Board of Assistant Aldermen—Vote of Pavement Contracts—Frauds.

The Board of Assistant Aldermen met at 3 P. M. yesterday, Mr. GALVIN in the chair.

A resolution was adopted to pave Fifty-third-street, from Eighth to Ninth-avenue, with Belgian pavement, and a communication was received from the Mayor vetoing eleven resolutions providing for the laying of Stone Foundation and other wooden pavements. It was laid on the table, and the Board adjourned. The following is the Mayor's veto:

MAYOR'S OFFICE, Dec. 14, 1870.

The Mayor returns, unapproved and with objections, eleven resolutions that provide for the paving with a patent wooden pavement (called the Stone Foundation) of eleven streets in the Twelfth Ward. They comprise together an area of fifty Ward blocks—some of which being between avenues have extensive frontages—and the streets in question taken together would extend about three miles. The Mayor has reason to believe that the owners of the property-holders who are to be assessed for this so called improvement, and has been unable to find one who desires it. In one street, (One Hundred and Eighteenth-street, from East River to Fourth-avenue,) property-holders who own 9,000 feet of land, and who will be benefited by the improvement, by petition and signatures, against the measure. The reasons for remonstrance will apply to most of the other streets, and it is appended as a schedule.

Upon each of the enumerated streets and avenues are vacant lots, in nearly all of them exceeds the number of vacant lots exceeds that of erected buildings. In twenty of the blocks no sewers have as yet been constructed. In several of the streets no gas-mains have as yet been laid or made ready for operation. But a fuller description of the irregularities will appear from the schedule hereto annexed.

The policy of paving unimproved or partially improved streets is at all times a dubious one, because of the continuous necessity of taking up the pavement whenever gas, or sewer, or water connections have to be made, by parties who from time to time erect buildings on the line of the street. Frequent tearing up of stone pavement makes inequalities, but frequent tearing up of wooden pavements disarranges the plane of foundation and exposes the wood to attrition and decay.

The Mayor calls your attention to a veto message sent to your predecessors last Spring in relation to the same kind of pavement as the one now in question. In that message were specified objections also to the manner of pavement contemplated, and which objections the Mayor still believes.

SCHEDULE A.—First-avenue, One Hundred and Tenth to One Hundred and Twenty-fourth-street—Curbed and guttered; has Croton mains; not sewered from One Hundred and Twenty-second to One Hundred and Twenty-fourth-street; gas-mains laid; and only partially built up.

Avenue A, Eighty-fifth to Ninety-second-street—Curbed; Croton; gas; no sewer; partially built upon.

One Hundred and Twelfth-street, First to Fourth-avenue—Curbed; guttered; gas; Croton; partially built up; sewer.

One Hundred and Fourteenth-street, East River to Fourth-avenue—Curbed; guttered; sewer or gas; Croton; and partially built up.

One Hundred and Fifteenth-street, Avenue A to Third-avenue—Curbed; guttered; no sewer or gas; Croton; and partially built up.

One Hundred and Sixteenth-street, East River to Third-avenue—Gas, water, sewer, gutter, curbed, guttered, and generally built up.

One Hundred and Twenty-first-street, East River to Fourth-avenue—Curbed, guttered, gas; no sewer, partially built up.

One Hundred and Twenty-second-street, East River to Third-avenue—Sewer, gas, Croton, curbed, guttered, and generally built up.

One Hundred and Twenty-third-street, East River to Fourth-avenue—Curbed, guttered, gas; no sewer, partially built up.

One Hundred and Twenty-second-street, East River to Second-avenue—Gas, water, curbed, gutter, and partially built.

One Hundred and Twenty-third-street, East River to Second-avenue—Gas, water, curb, gutter, no sewer, partially built.

Surrogate's Court—Decision in the Kennedy Will Case—The Situation Stated.

Surrogate HUTCHINGS rendered an opinion yesterday, in the matter of the contested will of JOHN KENNEDY, deceased. The will was contested by JEREMIAH KENNEDY, a brother of the deceased, on the ground of insanity, superinduced by the free use of liquor. The Surrogate reviewed the testimony introduced during the trial, and, in concluding this opinion, said, that in his judgment, the eccentricities exhibited by the testator were wholly occasioned by the too free use of liquor, and did not arise from a diseased brain, indicating insanity. He held that the will was the valid act of a sane man, and said that he should admit it to probate.

Messrs. R. P. ARDENEWS and JOHN M. COONEY appeared for the proponents of the will, and Mr. FRANCIS BYRNE for the contestant.

The hearing in the action to revoke the appointment of an administrator of the estate of ROBERT SLIMMON was adjourned until Monday next, on which occasion the sister of the deceased will be cross-examined.

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

Although no public auctions were advertised to take place at the Exchange yesterday, two private sales were effected as follows: V. K. STEVENSON, SON & CO., E. P. FAIRCHILD, auctioneer, by order of the Supreme Court, under the direction of THOMAS H. LANDON, Esq., referee, disposed of a three-story brown-stone house and lot, located on the north side of Seventy-eighth-street, between Third and Fourth avenues. The lot is eighteen feet front, by half the block in depth, and the house the same front, by forty-five feet deep. The property was sold to JOHN SCRYMSER for $12,800, which was considered a low figure, as the location will be more desirable when Lexington-avenue is opened, which improvement will bring the house next but one to the corner.

The other sale was made by D. M. SEAMAN; also, under an order of the Court, D. P. INGRAHAM, Jr., Esq., referee. The property disposed of is situated on the south side of Thirty-second-street, between Eighth and Ninth avenues. The lot is a small one, 16.8x98.9, and the house a brown-stone front. Only one bid was made, that of $12,867, at which sum the premises were sold to G. B. NASH. The object of the foreclosure suit in the action in question was merely to perfect the title, and the price at which the property sold was the exact sum necessary to cover purchase money, costs, expenses, &c.

No other business than the above was transacted at the Exchange yesterday, and no further public sales are advertised for this week. Legal transactions are liable to occur at any time, but the notices in regard to them are not generally given that publicity which oftentimes the real merit of the property offered deserves. It is therefore impossible to keep a record as to the time when the sales will be effected.

At private sale, brokers continue to report a good demand for both improved and unimproved property. V. K. STEVENSON & SON, No. 11 Pine-street, and STANLEY DAY, No. 111 Broadway, both advertise a large line of City houses and lots, many of which are desirably located. In country property, BLICKWELL'S Bank, No. 27 Liberty-street, advertises a valuable farm of 147 acres, at Mount Kisco, on the Harlem Railway. Of the recent transactions made at private sale, JOHN MCCLAVE, No. 44 Pine-street, reports having sold a plot of ground 80 feet by 285 feet on the west side of the Grand Drive, 325 feet south of One Hundred and Fifteenth-street, for $16,000. He also states that the same property was recently disposed of for $15,000. The following is the report in detail of the sales at the Exchange yesterday.

NOTICE TO TRAVELERS.
Families or gentlemen desiring to travel on the Continent of Europe, who can afford the expense of a courier, should never leave Paris without one; their services are invaluable in relieving the traveler from the complexity of cares and troubles respecting passports, examination and conveyance of baggage; in securing the best accommodation, in protecting the traveler from imposition, and in lessening the dangers to which they are exposed in various parts of the Continent. Competent and trustworthy couriers and traveling servants may always be obtained by applying to the COURIER SOCIETY, No. 3 Rue Castiglione, near the Tuileries Garden, Paris.

PROPOSALS.

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC.
TREASURY DEPARTMENT, ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 24, 1870.
TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:
BY the act of the General Assembly of the State of Georgia, approved Oct. 24, 1870, authority is given to the Governor to lease the Western and Atlantic Railroad, the property of the State, together with all the lands, workshops, depots, rolling stock and all the appurtenances of every character, for the term of twenty years, upon certain terms and conditions set forth in the act herein named.
The monthly rental shall not be less than twenty-five thousand dollars ($25,000), payable monthly. The lessee shall give a bond for the sum of eight millions of dollars ($8,000,000) to secure the prompt payment of the rental and to insure a free and full return of the road and its appurtenances at the expiration of the lease, or on the termination or forfeiture thereof, in as good condition as at the time of leasing, the ordinary wear and tear of the road only excepted. It shall be within this State, and the balance of rent of the State shall be upon real estate or railroad property. The lessees to be worth over and above their indebtedness, in addition to the bond, one thousand dollars ($100,000).
The Legislature reserves to itself the right, from time to time, to examine into the affairs of the lessee, and to require that the amount of security above cited shall be maintained unimpaired.
The lessees shall not be less than seven in number, a majority of whom shall have been for five years bona fide residents of this State, and shall represent a majority of the five largest interests in the lease. No railroad or express company, or any combination of them, shall, in any event, become the lessee, but they may become sureties on the bonds of the lessees. The lessee shall not charge a higher rate for local freights over any said road than the average rate charged by the Georgia Railroad and Banking Company, the Central Railroad and Banking Company, and the Macon and Western Railroad Company, for like local freights over said roads, and the said lessees shall have the same rights, exemptions, privileges, immunities and guarantees, except the establishment of banks, and shall be subject to the same liabilities, disabilities, and public burdens of said railroad companies last mentioned. The faith of the State is pledged to redeem all mortgage bonds and coupons now resting on the State Road as they fall due, and to save the lessees harmless against all such bonds and coupons.
The lessees are by this act constituted a body corporate and politic for the term of twenty years, under the name and style of the Western and Atlantic Railroad Company, having such powers, liabilities and immunities as are usual with railroad companies, and not in conflict with the Constitution and Laws of the United States, or of the State of Georgia; but they will not be allowed to make or permit any discrimination in favor of or against any other road, or persons having or transacting business with the said Western and Atlantic Railroad.
For the purpose of carrying out this act, proposals will be received until and including the 15th day of January, 1871, and addressed to "Treasurer of the State of Georgia, at Atlanta," and marked on the wrapper, "Proposals for the lease of the Western and Atlantic Railroad in accordance with an Act approved October 24, 1870." These proposals must state in full the names and residences of the parties uniting to make proposition, the amount that each of the parties therein named are worth, and shows their debts and liabilities, together with a full description of the character of the security which will be offered to complete the bond.
The property to be leased is a single-track railroad, 138 miles in length, with full and complete equipment of shops, depots, turn-outs, sidelings, engines, cars, &c., &c., &c., now in successful operation between the cities of Atlanta, in Georgia, and Chattanooga, in Tennessee. At Chattanooga the line is in direct rail connection with the Memphis and Charleston, Knoxville and Chattanooga, Chattanooga and New-Orleans, East Tennessee and Georgia, and Chattanooga and Chalmnatt (now in progress of construction) railroads, and at Atlanta with the Atlanta and Montgomery, Atlanta and Charleston, Atlanta and Savannah, and Atlanta and Mobile and Gulf roads, being the only railroad connection between the system of railways centering at Chattanooga and at Atlanta.
Copies of "An act to authorize the lease of the Western and Atlantic Railroad, and for other purposes therein mentioned," approved Oct. 24, 1870, can be had upon application at the Executive office.
By the Governor: RUFUS B. BULLOCH.
ROBERT H. ATKINSON, Executive Secretary.

PROPOSALS FOR WRAPPING PAPER AND TWINE.
POST-OFFICE DEPARTMENT, WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 3, 1870.
Sealed proposals will be received at this Department until the 20th day of January, 1871, at 12 o'clock noon, for furnishing WRAPPING PAPER AND TWINE for the use of the Post-Office Department of the United States for one year from the 1st day of February, 1871, the said articles to be delivered, free of expense, to the Department, at the Blank Agency of the Post-Office Department, Washington, D. C.
The quality and the estimated quantity of each article required are specified below:
18,000 reams of Wrapping Paper, 30x25 inches in size, and to weigh twenty-five pounds to the ream, each ream to contain twenty perfect quires.
150 reams of Wrapping Paper, 38x30 inches in size, and to weigh fifty-five pounds to the ream, each ream to contain twenty perfect quires.
60,000 pounds of Cotton Twine, in balls, to weigh about one-half pound each, and so bound as to prevent their becoming loose and tangled by transportation.
20,000 pounds of coarse Hemp Twine, in balls, to weigh from one to two pounds each, and so bound as to prevent their becoming loose and tangled by transportation.
Samples of the articles required will be furnished to persons who desire to bid, on application to the First Assistant Postmaster-General, Washington, D. C.
More or less than the estimated quantities may be ordered, as the necessities of the Department may require, at the discretion of the Postmaster-General.
Each bidder will be required to accompany his proposal with a bond, with two or more sureties, or a guarantee of his ability to comply with his bid, and a certificate from a Postmaster that such guarantors are reliable persons.
Awards will be made for each article separately, if deemed most advantageous to the Department.
Proposals must be addressed, on the envelope "Proposals for Letter Balances," and directed to the First Assistant Postmaster-General, Washington, D. C.
JOHN A. J. CRESWELL, Postmaster-General.

PROPOSALS FOR LETTER BALANCES.
POST-OFFICE DEPARTMENT, WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 2, 1870.
Sealed proposals will be received at this Department until the 20th day of January, 1871, at 12 o'clock noon, for furnishing LETTER BALANCES for the use of the Post-offices in the United States for one year from and after the 1st day of February, 1871, of the following denominations, namely:
First—Balances capable of weighing eight ounces, avoirdupois weight, to be graduated down to quarter ounces. Of these it is supposed that 1,000 will be wanted.
Second—Balances of the same capacity, graduated by the metric or gramme system. Of this class 100 may be required.
Third—Balances capable of weighing four pounds, avoirdupois weight, to be graduated to half-ounces. Of this class it is supposed that 200 will be wanted.
Perfect accuracy, strength and durability will be required in Balances to be furnished.
Samples of each description of Balances must accompany each bid, and the bidder who may obtain the contract will be required to furnish Balances of a quality in all respects equal to the sample.
Each Balance must be well and securely packed in a box for transportation, and delivered free of all expense to the Blank Agency, Washington, D. C.
Each bidder will be required to furnish with his proposal evidence of his ability to comply with his bid, and a certificate from a Postmaster that such guarantors are reliable persons.
Two sufficient sureties will be required to a contract.
Awards will be made for each article separately, if deemed most advantageous to the Department.
A failure to furnish promptly any article contracted for, or an attempt to impose upon the Department articles inferior, in the opinion of the Postmaster-General, to those contracted for, will be considered sufficient cause for the forfeiture of the contract.
The Postmaster-General reserves the right to reject any or all bids if, in his opinion, it is required by the interests of the Department.
Proposals must be addressed, on the envelope "Proposals for Letter Balances," and directed to the First Assistant Postmaster-General, Washington, D. C.
JOHN A. J. CRESWELL, Postmaster-General.

WROUGHT AND CAST IRON WORK.
POST-OFFICE AND UNITED STATES COURT HOUSE, NEW-YORK CITY.
OFFICE OF SUPERINTENDENT, Dec. 15, 1870.
Sealed proposals will be received at the office of the Superintendent until 12 M., Jan. 14, 1871, for furnishing, delivering, fitting, and putting in place the cast and wrought-iron work exhibited in plans, specifications and schedules now in the office, consisting of cast-iron columns, bed plates, &c., and wrought-iron beams, girders, &c.
The work of the columns, iron beams and girders must be furnished, delivered, fitted, and put in place, complete, within four months after date of written notice to commence the work, and the remainder as rapidly as required by the progress of the work, and as demanded by the superintendent.
The contractors will be permitted the use of the derricks and engines in putting the work in place, without charge, but will be required to pay the time of the engineers who may be employed, who will be furnished by the Department when required.
Scaffolding to be furnished by the contractors.
Proposals will be made by the piece or by weight for the different castings and beams as provided for in the schedules.
The work will not be subdivided among different bidders, but will be considered in the aggregate.
Payments will be made monthly, on the 1st of each month, per cent, until the final completion of the contract.
All bids must be accompanied by a penal bond in the sum of $25,000, that the bidder will accept and perform the contract if awarded him, the sufficiency of the security to be certified by the United States Judge, Clerk of the United States Court, or District Attorney of the district where he resides.
The Department reserves the right to reject any or all bids, if it be deemed for the interest of the Government to do so; and any bid that is not made on the printed form to be obtained in the office, and does not conform in every respect to the requirements of this advertisement, will not be considered; neither will any proposals be received from parties who are not themselves engaged in the manufacture of cast or wrought-iron work, and who have not the necessary facilities for getting out the castings or rolled beams.
Proposals will be addressed "Bids for Iron Work," and addressed to CALVIN T. HULBURD, Superintendent.

UNITED STATES ENGINEER'S OFFICE, HOUSTON AND GREENE STS., New-York, Dec. 12, 1870.
PROPOSALS WILL BE RECEIVED by the undersigned until noon of Jan. 11, 1871, for drilling by machinery holes for blasting, at such points as the Engineer may designate, in the tunnels and shaft at Hallett's Point, Astoria. Said holes to be from two (2) to ten (10) feet in depth, three (3) inches and three-quarters (3¾") to two (2) inches in diameter. Details and requirements furnished by the undersigned; a copy of the letter, with this advertisement, to be attached to each proposal offered.

CRIME IN THE CITY.

Sullivan Doomed to Death for the Murder of O'Brien.

Delivery of the Sentence by Recorder Hackett.

The trial of LAWRENCE SULLIVAN, indicted for killing JOHN O'BRIEN, at No. 1 Whitehall-st., in June last, was resumed at the Court of General Sessions, before Recorder HACKETT, yesterday. The prisoner was called to the witness stand to furnish his version of the occurrence.

He said he had been working for Mr. KNAPP, No. 94 Broad-street, the day of the occurrence; was going home about seven in the evening; met his brother-in-law, MICHAEL SWEENEY, who asked him to take his wife away; that there was nothing good going on at No. 1 Whitehall-street; witness went upstairs to his wife's room; she was out; in, he went into JULIA BUCKLEY'S room and found his wife there; he took her by the hand and brought her out; they went into her room and sat down conversing together; JOHN CONNOR came in and sat down also; shortly after he was going out and met his mother-in-law on the stairs and she struck him several times with a stick of wood; O'BRIEN was standing there and asked witness what he struck the old woman for, and then struck him twice in the face; then seized a stick and knocked him down; while he was down he pulled out his knife to defend himself; he was insensible after being knocked down, and did not know what he was doing until he was arrested.

On his cross-examination, he said that there was a whole crowd about him with clubs and pistols threatening to kill him at the time; that there was no ill-feeling between him and O'BRIEN, and that he was sorry. He was asked if he remembered having seen Mr. BUCKLEY at the inquest, and said, no. Mrs. BUCKLEY is a villain, she only wants horns to make a beast of her. He then commenced to show signs of an excitable temperament, and after a few unimportant questions to which he made contradictory answers, he was ordered down from the stand. Mr. SAMUEL WELLS, the phrenologist, was introduced next to show that the prisoner was so constituted as to be subject to violent fits of anger, yet he would have no control over his faculties. His evidence was excluded. MARIA DOYLE saw part of the disturbance between SULLIVAN and Mrs. SWEENEY, but did not see the killing.

Mrs. SWEENEY, who spoke in the Irish language, was next called. Her evidence was rendered into English by an interpreter. She testified that she keeps a fruit-stand near the South Ferry, and was called in on the evening in question to prevent SULLIVAN from beating his wife; when she went in she slapped him in the face; he struck her on the head with an umbrella; O'BRIEN then struck him and knocked him down. Her statements then became somewhat confused and she was sent down. A few other witnesses were introduced to show that the prisoner's character for peace and quietness was good up to the time of the occurrence.

The case was subsequently summed up, after which the jury were charged on points of law by the Court. The jurors found a verdict of murder in the first degree without leaving their seats. SULLIVAN was then told that he would be sentenced immediately, and was asked if he had anything to say. He replied as follows:

"I am an innocent man. I demand a trial on the spot. I never intended to hurt O'BRIEN. I sewed him no spite, and if I'm found guilty of murder for that, there is no law in the United States. O'BRIEN struck me before I did anything to him."

At the conclusion of SULLIVAN'S remarks, Recorder HACKETT proceeded to pass judgment amid deep silence in the Court-room.

He spoke as follows:

"This is the most mortal and brutal murder that I have ever seen in my experience as a Judge, and the jury justly found you guilty. The sentence of the law is that you be taken to the City Prison, and there confined until the 30th day of January, between the hours of 10 A. M. and 2 P. M., when you shall be hanged by the neck until you are dead."

The condemned man was removed from the Court-room without betraying any perceptible evidence of emotion at the delivery of the sentence.

SENTENCE OF JERRY DUNN FOR KILLING LOGAN.

At the Court of Oyer and Terminer, yesterday, before Judge CARDOZO, Mr. BARTLETT made a motion in arrest of judgment in the case of JEREMIAH DUNN, convicted of manslaughter in the third degree, in having killed JAMES LOGAN, otherwise known as "LOGAN No. 2." The motion was made on the ground that the verdict of manslaughter, as recorded, was not the real verdict of the jury; that the real verdict rendered by the jury, declaring that they found "no mitigating circumstances to justify the crime," was no verdict. It was a verdict neither in form or substance, and one which could not be legally rendered. Its terms are repugnant to the legal definition of manslaughter. There is no such thing as crime "without mitigating circumstances to justify it." The crime of manslaughter in the third degree necessarily has mitigating circumstances. This verdict was void in law, and imprisonment under it is necessarily false imprisonment.

Judge CARDOZO said he had not the slightest doubt on the subject. What the jury said in reference to mitigating circumstances was mere surplusage, and not of the slightest materiality. The jury had been polled, and having announced the verdict as recorded as their verdict, and it having been received without objection of counsel, it could not now be disturbed.

The Court then sentenced DUNN to imprisonment at State Prison at hard labor for the term of four years, at the same time expressing the hope that the ordeal through which the prisoner had passed, and the punishment he was about to endure would be a warning to other reckless men in the community who are in the habit of carrying pistols about their person, to which much of the crime in this City is attributable.

DUNN was then removed by the Sheriff's officers.

OTHER SENTENCES.

Subsequently POLLARD HARRISON, a negro, was charged with violating the Election laws. He pleaded ignorance of the law, and the Court believing his statement accepted bail in $100. His trial was postponed indefinitely.

JAMES CRAWFORD, nineteen years old, was charged with the robbery of a watch and also a watch and chain. He pleaded guilty to one charge, and, having a bad character among the Police, was sentenced to State Prison for twenty years by Judge CARDOZO.

ANDREW HUNTER pleaded guilty to burglary in the third degree, and was sentenced to two years' imprisonment.

JOHN W. HOGAN was sentenced to two years and six months for burglary.

JAMES HOGAN assaulted a Chinaman with a knife, and was sent to State Prison for three years.

WILLIAM ROW, eighteen years old, was tried for larceny of a watch chain and money from another boy of the same age. The jury was still out, when the Court adjourned to this morning.

As the Jefferson Market Police Court yesterday, before Judge SHANDLEY, WILLIAM BOURKE was held to answer for stealing $75 from JAMES OLIVER, a resident of Jersey City.

The Baptist Memorial Service—Addresses by Dr. Armitage, Rev. Mr. Elder and Others.

The Fifty-third-street Baptist Church people continued their dedicatory services yesterday afternoon and evening. Beginning at 2 P. M., an hour's devotional exercises were held and conducted by Drs. MICKELS, HOLMES and STEVENS, after which Rev. T. D. ANDERSON, D. D., presiding on the occasion, delivered an address touching the pressing claims of this City for more enlarged and extended evangelising efforts. Dr. ARMITAGE also followed in a similar strain, and pressed home on the audience the claims of the Baptist Church in this City and county upon its members. A free discussion on home and foreign work was then had, and both sides had able advocates; but it was admitted that this City, being a centre of great moral and immoral influence, had just now more need of Christian labors than any part of heathendom. In the evening the devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. Mr. REID, who read the 122d and 123d Psalms. Rev. Dr. KENDRICK offered prayer, and Rev. Mr. REID, a missionary from Africa. After singing again, Rev. J. F. ELDER spoke on "Denominational Unity in Church Extension." He rejoiced in the organization of the Baptist Sunday-school Union, and of the various social unions as concentrating the different churches so that the denomination can now present a united front. Among the reasons assigned why they had not built themselves up here, he said that this City is rapidly falling into the hands of the extreme rich and the extreme poor, and the class from which the denomination has mainly drawn its strength and forces has been driven to the suburbs. But still they are not as badly off as the Presbyterians, one of whose ministers said in his hearing a day or two ago that they had not dedicated a new church in this City for twenty years. He urged denominational unity in church extension on the ground of the influence of union, and to direct it toward cities because of the superior influence that cities exercise, and because all the churches of the New Testament were city churches. He wanted every member of every Baptist church in the City to feel that he is the as interest in every other church, and in the work of the denomination throughout the City, and he hoped to see such a union here as shall enable them to plant churches here and there, and gather the tribes of Israel every year to such feasts of dedication. Baptists carry their church independence almost to disintegration, and it is time to stop are disintegration cease. There is not a third-rate business capacity in the Baptist denomination. Give them a lot and they will build a meeting-house on Mount Pisgah, or on the back side of the moon. This City is now mapped out, streets and avenues are being opened, and it is not difficult to see whither population is drifting; and there are lots on this island that ought to contain Baptist churches, but they will be built upon by Catholics and Presbyterians and Methodists, unless the Baptists commit this work to a suitable committee to carry it out, and to secure lots before it is too late. The wealthy Baptists of the City are ready to give their money, but they do not know what to do or where to direct their wealth.

Rev. Mr. PENDLETON made a few remarks, and said that, during his five years' ministry here, there had been an actual gain of 400 souls to the church and to the denomination. A brief recital of his pastoral labors was then given, after which the subject was discussed by others. The services today will take the direction of "Christian Benevolence" and "Ministerial Education."

Christmas Appeal for Poor Children.

Winter is a painful season to the poor and homeless children of the City. The Children's Aid Society has under its charge many thousands, and there is among them peculiar suffering this year from the want of clothing and shoes. Great numbers come to the industrial schools and lodging-houses, bare-footed, half-clad and shivering in the Winter's cold. Hundreds suffer from want of food. Many who are homeless and wandering about the streets of the City apply to the Central Office for a home.

The season of joy for all who have a home has come. We decire to make the Christmas holidays happy also for those who have no home and few friends. We wish to give one cheerful day at least to the children of the poor. For $50 we can provide three homeless children with clothing and send them to the Far West, where they will grow up to be honest men and women in a farmer's family. Who will give this Christmas present of a home? A party of these homeless children are ready to go to the West in the holidays if the means be furnished.

If our friends kindly aid, we hope to give a good Christmas dinner to the thousands of little girls in our twenty industrial schools and to the newsboys and street boys and homeless girls in our five lodging-houses. We desire also to distribute hundreds of pairs of shoes and warm garments among the poorest of the children. Our objects are to teach and make better and save to society the thousands of neglected children in the streets of New-York City. Who in this season of "good will" will aid us in this work? C. L. BRACE, Secretary,

Children's Aid Society, No. 19 East Fourth-street, New-York.

Gifts of provisions and clothing may be sent to the Central Office, No. 19 East Fourth-street, New-York, or will be called for if the address be forwarded. Donations of money may be inclosed to either of the undersigned. If they are in checks or Post-office orders, they can be made payable to the order of J. E. WILLIAMS, Treasurer. WM. A. BOOTH, President, No. 100 Wall-street; J. E. WILLIAMS, Treasurer, Metropolitan National Bank, No. 108 Broadway; C. L. BRACE, Secretary, No. 19 East Fourth-street, New-York.

There were during the past year in our five lodging-houses 12,162 different boys and girls; and 136,086 lodgings and 150,176 meals were supplied; 9,707 were sent to good homes, mainly in the West. In the nineteen day and eight evening industrial schools were 7,008 children, who were taught and partly fed and clothed. There have been 4,470 orphans in the lodging-houses.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

NEW-YORK.

At a meeting of the Commissioners of Parks, held on Tuesday, the Treasurer made estimates of the amounts required for park improvements and work for the ensuing fiscal year. The total estimate for maintenance accounts amounts to $800,000, and a few of the items are as follows: Care of roads, $38,648 07; repair of roads, $90,007 71; repairs of walks, $14,586 62; music, $6,809; ice, $10,854 17, (which includes the skating expenses;) care of animals, $14,287 73, and park and gate-keepers' wages, $60,434 52. There is an additional estimate for the care and improvement of other parks than the Central, which will swell the figures beyond those of the preceding year.

The fair given by the ladies of the Alanson Methodist Episcopal Church, in Norfolk, notice of which has already appeared in these columns, is progressing satisfactorily to all engaged. The rooms are crowded nightly, and the prospect of securing the coveted $2,000 with which to balance the church debt, seems to be very encouraging. It will be continued throughout the week, and everybody who is friendly to the church and to good music will attend. A fund from outside the Society, having no special interest in the fair, said yesterday that she "had visited the Foundling Fair, the Hebrew and the Old Ladies' Fair, and many others this season, but nowhere had she seen so great a variety and abundance of beautiful things." Everything is selling very cheap, everything needed for Christmas is almost certain to be found there.

On Wednesday evening ADAM BECK, a German, was taken to the Fourteenth Precinct Station-house and locked up in a cell in an insensible condition from intoxication. Yesterday morning it was found that his left leg was broken, and it was then ascertained that he had fallen down-stairs the previous evening, at No. 214 Grand-street. He was taken to Bellevue Hospital.

A meeting of Police Inspectors and Captains and Sergeants was held at the Central office yesterday. Capt. THOMAS was made Chairman, and Capt. GARLAND, Secretary; Inspector DILKS, Capt. WALSH and Serge. REED, THOMPSON and MINER were requested to prepare resolutions, which are to be engrossed and framed, as a testimonial to Hon. MATHEW T. BRENNAN, late Police Commissioner.

The Board of Supervisors held a short session yesterday afternoon, the Mayor presiding. The only business transacted was to direct the payment of bills for repairs to the armories of the Sixty-ninth and Ninth Regiments, the first being for $6,700 90, and the last for $2,927 50. The Board then adjourned.

The Journeymen Shoemakers' Association meets this evening, and received reports from various lodges, commending their course in the present strike or "lockout." It was announced that the organization would be in possession of $200,000 in two days to be used in support of the movement.

HERMAN LASSING, aged seventy-five, of Forty-ninth-street and Tenth-avenue, dropped dead last evening in front of No. 161 West Thirteenth-street. Deputy Coroner JOHN BRACH granted a permit for the removal of the remains to the residence of his son, Dr. LASSING.

A violent wind prevailed yesterday, increasing in force at evening. The air at times was thick with dust, and signs, banners, and shutters were numerously displaced. Off the coast it blew a strong gale, and disasters along the beach are feared.

In the case of FERRIS PALMER against LOUISA PALMER the plaintiff has obtained a decree of divorce in the Superior Court. The decree permits the plaintiff to remarry, but prohibits that privilege to the defendant.

Mr. ANDREW J. RICH, of Buffalo, while on his way to the opera with his family, last night, was seized with apoplexy in Seventh-avenue, near Thirty-first-street, and died at the Grand Hotel.

This evening Hon. J. S. DIEHL will deliver his famous lecture upon "Oriental and Bible Lands," with handsome illustrations, in the Church of the Stranger, Mercer-street.

MICHAEL WELDON was appointed a clerk in the ninth division at Custom-house, yesterday, at a salary of $1,200, in place of JOHN HALIT, promoted.

BROOKLYN.

At the City Court, yesterday, before Judge NEILSON, a suit was commenced against JACOB ROSENGARDEN by ALBERT FRIES, for the recovery of $812 81. In August of 1867 the plaintiff obtained a judgment for a similar amount, in a suit against a Mrs. HOTALING. The defendant acted as her agent, and claims to be exonerated from the responsibility of the suit, in consideration of $200. It was alleged that he has refused to comply with his agreement. The defendant said that the claim of FRIES against Mrs. HOTALING was a fictitious one, and that the lady named absented herself from Court, and allowed judgment to be taken by default. The Jury rendered a verdict in favor of the plaintiff, for the full amount. THEODORE F. JACKSON appeared for plaintiff, and A. H. DALY, for defendant.

At the General Term of the Supreme Court, yesterday, before Judges BARNARD, GILBERT and TAPPAN, the question of the power of the Prospect Park Commissioners to dispose of any of the land attached to the Park by public sale, was argued in the affirmative by JOSHUA M. VAN COTT, and in the negative by WILLIAM H. GOODRICH. Until the question is settled, the Commissioners state that they will find it impossible to dispose of the surplus land which now lies on the eastern side of the Park. The Court reserved its decision.

About twenty-six druggists have complied with the order of the Excise Commissioner, directing them to procure license for the sale of intoxicating liquors.

The Callicot case was adjourned at the United States Circuit Court yesterday, owing to the absence of counsel.

Warrants were issued, yesterday, for the arrest of twenty-five liquor-dealers, for failure to procure licenses.

The Water Board, yesterday, confirmed the assessment of $6,877 75 on Clinton-street, for the construction of a sewer.

Yesterday afternoon, JAMES P. MCHALE, a slate roofer, was instantly killed by falling from the roof of the Puritan Church, at the corner of Lafayette and Marcy-avenues. The deceased left a wife and three little children unprovided for.

WESTCHESTER COUNTY.

The annual meeting of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of Westchester County was held at White Plains yesterday. About 300 persons were present. The meeting was called to order by JAMES GIBSON, Esq., the President. According to the report of the Auditing Committee, it appears that, during the past year, the Society expended for new buildings and improvements of its Fair grounds nearly $10,000. The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows: President—N. Holmes Odell. Vice-Presidents—Edward De Witt, First District; Francis A. Palmer, Second District; Walter H. Height, Third District. Manager—J. W. Scribner. Corresponding Secretary—Joseph H. Miller. Corresponding Secretary—Daniel K. Sherwood.

NEW-JERSEY.

The trial of the Morristown incendiaries having ended, Judge DEPEYSTER yesterday sent GIBSON KENT, considered the principal, to sixteen years' imprisonment in the State Prison. His accomplices, who testified against KENT, were sentenced as follows: DOTY and STEWARD, four years; DUNSTER, WILLIS and STOUT, three years; and WOODRUFF, who was shot in the arm while being captured, one year in the State Prison.

Yesterday Officer COBBETT, of the Newark Police force, found a coat, hat, vest, and a navy revolver lying on the river bank, a short distance below EDWARD BALDWIN'S smelting works, No. 268 East River-street. EDWARD FITZSIMMONS, living at No. 13 Oxford-street, says he saw a man jump into the water, and, after struggling, sink, well out in the stream.

Yesterday morning JOHN MOLONEY fell from the ladder while painting a store, Odd-Fellows' Hall, Hoboken, and sustained fatal injuries. MOLONEY had been attending the ball of the Sarsfield Guards, and was about going home when, at the top of the steps his feet slipped and he fell over the banisters to the floor below.

Yesterday Mayor O'NEIL, of Jersey City, received a note from the cashier of the First National Bank, with which the city account is kept, stating that the account had been overdrawn to the amount of $114,000, and that until some arrangements had been made to secure this balance, no more warrants would be cashed.

Mrs. CATHERINE DENHAM was arrested by Detective HAGGERTY, in Newark, yesterday. She is charged with having stolen dresses, under-clothing, money, &c., from Mrs. JOSEPH SWIRE, of Roseville, and Mrs. OAKLEY, of Orden-place, ladies with whom she had lived. Some of the missing articles were found in her possession.

The Park Methodist Episcopal Church, of Rutherford Park, N. J., will commence worship in the Union Lyceum of that place on next Sunday morning, 18th inst., at 10½ o'clock. Rev. S. P. Hammond is the popular pastor, and the enterprise promises to succeed admirably.

Early yesterday morning, as the Jersey City ferry-boat was leaving the foot of Cortlandt-street, New-York, it was run into by a propeller, which cut into the gentlemen's cabin nearly two feet, and did considerable damage. No persons were hurt.

Police Officer DOBBS, of the Newark force, was seriously beaten and kicked in the head by three drunken and riotous men whom he was about to arrest, yesterday morning.

ARMY AND NAVY RECORD.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—The following general order was promulgated from the War Department today:

By direction of the President, and under provisions of section 5 of the act of Congress, approved July 15, 1870, the following named officers are retired from active service to date from Dec. 15, 1870, with exception as to the date noted:

First—On their own application after thirty years of service, in accordance with the act of Congress of July 15, 1870: Col. Isaac V. D. Reeve, unassigned, to date from Jan. 1, 1871; Lieut.-Col. Benjamin S. Roberts, Third Cavalry; Lieut.-Col. Henry W. Wessels, unassigned, to date from Jan. 1, 1871.

Second—For incapacity resulting from long and faithful service, from wounds or injury received, from disease contracted, or from exposure in the line of duty, in conformity with sections 16 and 17 of the act of Aug. 3, 1861: Col. Henry B. Carrington, unassigned; Lieut.-Col. Dickinson Woodruff, unassigned; Capt. John Elliott, unassigned; Capt. John Lomahin, of the First Infantry; Second-Lieut. Michael Moore, unassigned.

Third—Upon the full rank of the command held by them when they were retired, in accordance with sections 16 and 17 of the act of Aug. 3, 1861, and section 25 of the act of July 28, 1866. Upon full rank of Colonel: Major Theophilus P. Rodenbough, unassigned; First Lieut. John Pickett, unassigned. Upon full rank of Lieutenant-Colonel: Capt. Thomas Shea, Seventeenth Infantry. Upon full rank of Captain: First Lieut. David H. Cortelyou, Ninth Infantry.

Second-Lieut. Michael Moore, unassigned, who are on duty, will, as soon as relieved, repair to their respective homes. Fifty further lists of officers to be retired will be published as soon as decided upon.

By order of the Secretary of War:

E. D. TOWNSEND, Adjutant-General.

Secretary Robeson today received a telegram announcing the death, at Cooperstown, N. Y., yesterday, of Rev. Charles Samuel Stewart, Senior Chaplain in the United States Navy.

What is more becoming than one of KNOX'S latest styles of Hats? There is but one, there can be but one, answer to this—nothing. KNOX is master of his profession, and full well knows he what to put first when he fashions his style. KNOX'S Hats are things of beauty; they give joy to the wearer. They add grace to the person whose brows they shelter, and lend dignity in their proud crown. King William may feel proud of his laurels won on the bloody battle-field, but KNOX should feel more proud of those won on the fields of science and art.
